DIRECT OPERATION OF AGENTS USING TWO-WAY RADIOS

Scientific Methods Play Havoc With Distilleries in Hills of Georgia and Two Neighboring States

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—

Employing modern scientific methods based on the joint use of airplanes and automobiles equipped with two-way radio communication, the federal alcohol tax unit is playing havoc with the ancient industry of moonshine distilleries in the hill country of Georgia and two other neighboring southeastern states.

Officials of the tax unit, a division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, admitted today arrests of moonshiners have been running at the rate of about 800 monthly in the Atlanta division since the inauguration of the new airplane-automobile-radio system of detection about two months ago. In addition to Georgia, three states come under the operations of the Atlanta division, Alabama, South Carolina and Florida, though most of the unit's activities thus far have been confined to the first three states.

Long a prolific source of unlicensed still operations both before and during prohibition, the Georgia and Alabama hill country, embracing the northern tier of the two states, was selected as a logical target for the new method of attack, which had previously been experimented with in other sections. The results have been highly successful, as attested by the large number of arrests recorded.

Tactics Explained.
While officials of the unit would not be quoted and were even reluctant to discuss the tactics employed, fearful it would jeopardize the future success of their program, it was learned operations are about as follows:

Scout automobiles manned by internal revenue agents and equipped with two-way radio are sent out to the section where an aerial survey is to be made. Taking up their positions at strategic points along the highways of the region they await word from a government plane flying overhead. The plane, once secured from the coast guard service and manned by a pilot and an observer, circles slowly over the terrain low enough to pick out the tell-tale smoke of a still. When the observer spots one in action (dead ones are not bothered) a radio communication is sent to one of the waiting scout cars giving the proper directions for a raid. Usually they catch the operators red-handed.

Observers for the plane are especially selected for their knowledge of the hill country to be surveyed. So are most of the agents in the ground scout cars. It is easy

TOTS DIE TRAILING MOTHER INTO FIRE TO RESCUE THIRD

ALBANY, N. Y., April 5.—(AP) Two small children toddled after their mother to a fiery death today as she ran into their blazing home to rescue her infant daughter.

Mrs. Earl Van Auken carried Michael, 3, and Andrew, 18 months, to safety in the yard after a stove explosion set the one-story house ablaze, then dashed back into the flames, snatched up 10-month-old Anne, broke a window and escaped.

But the little boys, child-like, had toddled back into the house to find their mother. Not until she had carried the baby to safety and looked for the other children was she aware they had re-entered the blazing home.

A bucket brigade proved ineffective and the house burned to the ground.

ATLANTA-MEXICO AIR LANE OPENED

Atlantans Participate in Maiden Flight on New Route to the South.

Midnight in Atlanta . . .
Supper in Mexico City . . .
A silvered monster plane roared off a Candler field runway a few minutes after midnight this morning with 26 passengers to be welcomed today at Mexico City's airport by United States Ambassador to Mexico, Josephus Daniels.

It was the maiden flight of Eastern Air Lines' new passenger and mail route linking the capital of Mexico by direct air service with Atlanta, the air-gate of the south.

Overnight Flight.

It was the inauguration of overnight air transportation between New York City and Mexico City, a schedule that will permit, henceforth, dinner at night in New York City, luncheon the next day in Mexico City.

Seven Atlantans stepped aboard the plane when it nestled to a halt here shortly before midnight. They were:
Mayor Hartsfield, Alvin B. Cates, president of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Jesse Draper, chairman of the chamber's aviation committee; Wiley L. Moore, Eastern Air Lines director; Smythe Gambrell, E. A. I. attorney; William K. Jenkins and Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Atlanta Constitution. With them was Mayor Ben E. Douglas, of Charlotte, N. C.

Greeting them as they boarded the plane was Congressman Robert Ramspeck, of Atlanta, who joined the flight in Washington.

Others on board included Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, wartime ace who is president of the air line inaugurating the service by the completion of a link joining Houston and Brownsville; V. E. Chenes, company traffic manager; John Farber and Jesse Briegel, New York.

Simple Question Draws A Complicated Answer

CHANUTE, Kas., April 5.—(AP)

Mrs. Bert Mezel telephoned to the fire department to ask where to vote.

Trucks rushed to her home, hose was connected to hydrants and firemen piled onto her porch, where a startled Mrs. Mezel explained: "I just wanted to go and vote for the water softener."

She declined a ride on the hook and ladder truck to the polls, which turned out to be at the fire station.

Oh, yes, Chanutte approved the water softener.

STATE FACES LOSS OF HUGE SHARE IN U. S. ROAD FUNDS

However, Governor Believes Halting of Highway Work Will Not Jeopardize Program.

Georgia faced loss of a large portion of federal road funds last night as Governor Rivers went forward with a Highway Department budget slash which would divert cash to other state services.

At Washington, federal highway officials said Georgia stood to lose a major portion of future road fund allotments. Governor Rivers specified in his budget cutting order that projects financed entirely by federal funds not be affected. Federal officials said only grade crossing eliminations were financed entirely without state matching of funds.

Georgia's 1940 apportionment for road work already has been set up as follows:

For federal aid projects, $2,507,151.
For secondary or feeder roads, $378,073.
For grade crossing eliminations, $477,283.

State Warned of Danger.

The penalty for diversion of state highway funds might be as high as one-third of total apportionment, Washington officials explained, with the final decision discretionary with the secretary of agriculture.

However, the Governor when asked earlier if he thought his order might jeopardize federal matching money, he pointed out a section which he said could take care of such a problem if it arose. He referred to a provision giving the department the right to seek an amendment to his order if it decided some project became an emergency job and should be advertised for letting.

He said the time might come when the state might be forced to choose between losing federal highway funds and maintaining schools, state hospital for the insane and similar projects.

He indicated savings of any significance were possible only in

South and Middle West Join To Get Fund for Farmers

Senate and House Group Willing To Make Trade With Administration If $300,000,000 More Is Provided for Growers.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—Congressional groups displayed a willingness today to do some "hoss trading" with the administration on farm legislation.

Both senate and house leaders said they would go along with the present crop control program, opposing any changes not wanted by the administration, if from $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 additional funds were provided for its activities.

President Roosevelt has publicly opposed increasing government outlays for farmers unless congress took steps to obtain the revenue to finance them.

However, senators who have conferred recently with Secretary of Agriculture Wallace said he preferred additional expenditures to attempts to revamp the present program.

Developments today at both ends of the capital pointed to a powerful movement to increase appropriations.

ATLANTA POISED TO FETE ARMY DAY

Parade Here, Open House at Fort McPherson To Mark Observance Today

A parade, a radio address, open house and ceremonies at Fort McPherson, will mark Atlanta's observance today of Army Day.

The fort will be thrown open for inspection all day, with a colorful program of exhibits and events arranged for the visitors.

Fifty-one light tanks will leave the fort at 9 o'clock this morning to parade through the business district following a route down Whitehall street to Peachtree, out Peachtree to West Peachtree, out West Peachtree to North avenue, and return to Fort McPherson via Spring, Peters and Lee streets.

The tank corps will return to its base at Fort Benning this afternoon, after a 30-mile trip to give officers completing a special training course a taste of practical maneuvering.

Under the direction of army officers, practical exhibits of phases of army activity will be on display at the fort. Included are a field kitchen, serving beans and coffee, a first aid unit, a brigade radio and telephone setup, and eight machine guns with accessories, cars, and fire control instruments. Company F of the 22d infantry will hold open house from 10 o'clock in the morning until 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Guides will be on hand to conduct visitors through the barracks, mess room and kitchens of the company.

A formal guard mount will be

U. S. Industry Is Mobilized For War Needs — Johnson

Army Official Asserts Factories Geared To Turn Out All Save 55 of 7,000 Items Needed by Troops in Six-Month Period.

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP)—Acting Secretary of War Louis Johnson said tonight American industry now was "substantially mobilized" to meet the demands that would be made upon it in the event of war.

In an interview a few hours before his scheduled address at the national industrial preparedness dinner of the American Conference on National Defense, he disclosed the War Department program was to have sufficient supplies on hand to carry out initial force of 400,000 men through the first six months of war.

Of the 7,000 industrial items that would be required by the army in wartime, he said, industry now is geared to turn out all save 55 of them in a six-month period. And, he added, progress is being made toward bringing the remaining 35 processes within the six-month bracket.

"It took 14 months to get the first division of soldiers into the fighting line in the World War," he remarked parenthetically, "and they were equipped with French guns, foreign munitions, British rifles, and were carried for the most part in foreign transports."

"We can never expect again to have 14 months in which to get ready."

The War Department, he said, has no intention of "dislocating" any American industry "unless an emergency comes," but he added: "A prepared America means a peaceful America, in my opinion."

In his prepared address, Johnson told the story of what he called American industrial mobilization to insure peace for the United States by demanding the respect of belligerents.

Industry, he said, had responded to the War Department's request for co-operation immediately after the Munich pact which dismembered Czechoslovakia.

Johnson quoted President Roosevelt as saying to him: "In the revival of the spirit of national defense, industry is playing a leading and vital role. I am conscious of its loyalty. I appreciate its co-operative efforts. Its patriotic services I commend as an example of good and useful citizenship."

Progressively Johnson named the materials vital to the conduct of a war which the United States must import — chromium, high speed steel, tungsten, cobalt, molybdenum, and vanadium.

ON GUARD AGAINST 'LIGHTNING WAR'; ROME NEAR ACTION

Chamberlain Reveals North Sea Patrol by Vessels 'Ready for Any Eventuality' in Commons

LONDON, April 5.—(UP)

British warships and planes manned for "all eventualities" tonight patrolled the North sea and channel coasts after Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain revealed that Great Britain is fully armed against any lightning attack that might come from the continent.

Chamberlain assured the house of commons that Britain is in "constant readiness for all eventualities," including any possible attack by air or undersea, on the British Isles during what he described as the present "time of tension."

The government also announced that 1,000 British merchant ships were being armed with anti-aircraft and anti-submarine guns "to meet all expected requirements" and form a second line of defense.

Other Developments.

Britain's armed preparations were closely interwoven with these developments:

1—Great Britain and Poland tonight agreed on a mutual defense pact—a keystone of the British-led "stop Hitler" drive. Polish Ambassador Edward Rydz-Smigly said that Chamberlain would make formal announcement of the alliance in commons Thursday.

The formal treaty, it was understood, will be signed either in London or Warsaw later and will be accompanied by a secret understanding regarding actual cases of aggression which would bring it into operation. The Polish delegates denied that any agreement had been reached between Poland and Germany regarding the free city of Danzig.

2—Premier Benito Mussolini, of Italy, and Chancellor Adolf Hitler, of Germany, facing an anti-aggression encirclement by Europe's nations, were reported to have held a long telephone conversation on military and other collaboration to thwart the "stop Hitler" movement.

Nazis Enraged.

3—Quarters close to the Nazi government, enraged by what they called Britain's "madhouse" naval precautions, said that immediate action was planned to impress Europe with the fighting strength of the Rome-Berlin axis.

4—Mussolini continued to concentrate infantry, artillery and planes preparatory to what was expected to be a coup against Albania, tiny Fascist-dominated kingdom across the Adriatic.

In Tirana, Albanian officials declared "suitable military precautions" were being taken while the cabinet met late to discuss the international situation.

Special importance was attached to the Italian-German military talks because of Pariani's connections with Albania.

He not only is the commander

'Suitable Precautions' Taken by King Zog as Tension in Italy Indi- cates Swift Aggression.

(Copyright, 1939, by United Press.)

TIRANA, Albania, Thursday, April 6.—(UP)—Albania early today was reported to be rushing arms and reinforcements to the seaport of Valona, 45 miles across the Straits of Albranto from southeastern Italy, to resist a threatened occupation of this tiny Adriatic kingdom by Italian armed forces.

All Italian residents of Albania were leaving the country, on orders from Rome, aboard three specially-chartered Italian ships.

TIRANA, Albania, April 5. (AP)—Albanian authorities said tonight that they had taken "suitable military precautions" to maintain the tiny kingdom's independence.

(In Belgrade, capital of neighboring Yugoslavia, reliable quarters heard reports Wednesday night that Italy had informed Yugoslavia of her intention to occupy Albania and place her under Italian protection. It was reported Italy intended to begin occupation during the night.)

King Zog and his cabinet sat up late tonight studying Italian plans for strengthening a 20-year defensive alliance Italy and Albania signed in 1927.

Italians Flee.

Foreigners here, learning that Italians were leaving Albania in large numbers, expressed considerable concern over the immediate situation.

An heir to the throne was born this morning to Queen Geraldine, and this was accepted immediately by the country's simple inhabitants as an occasion for a tremendous wave of intense nationalism.

"We are a small country, but proud of our independence," was a representative comment. "We are determined to preserve it at all costs."

The Italian proprietor of Tirana's leading hotel and his Italian staff left the country after closing the building.

As the cabinet studied the Italian proposals, the belief spread

Thousands Expected in City For Fourth Dogwood Festival

Scenes of Picturesque Beauty Will Greet Visitors Who Will Pay Homage to Tree Which Legends Reveal Was Used for Timber for Crucifixion.

Thousands of white blossoming dogwood trees will be in full bloom this week end, providing Atlanta with an Easter costume of unrivaled beauty as the fourth annual dogwood festival gets under way.

Scenes of picturesque beauty throughout the city, and especially in the Druid Hills section, will draw thousands of Georgians to the city to pay homage to the tree which legends reveal was used for the timber for the Cross at the time of the crucifixion.

Although the week-end festival will officially open on Friday at 1 o'clock with a concert by the DeCatur Boys' High band in the Dogwood park at Ponce de Leon and Clifton road, informal drives and rides through the dogwood-studded section, and peaceful walks down the shady streets and roads lined with the trees, may be enjoyed all Friday morning.

After the high school concert, a dance pageant of spring, featuring several hundred talented young children directed by Mrs. Charles LaFontaine, takes place at 3 o'clock. This will be presented under the blossom-covered trees. At the intersection of Oakdale road and Ponce de Leon avenue the Georgia State Girls' Military band will give a concert at 3:30 o'clock to be followed at night by a concert by the Big Bethel choir, who will sing spirituals, beginning at 7:30 o'clock.

For more youthful sightseers and many of the parents, an Easter egg hunt and a dog and pony show will be given Friday afternoon beginning at 2:30 o'clock at "Lullwater Farms," the estate of Walter T. Candler at Emory University, and one of the beauty spots in the Druid Hills section. The hunt is being sponsored by members of the Charities Circle for the Atlanta Child's Home.

Saturday the festival program calls for tours to the spacious gardens and estates of Guy Woolford, Cator Woolford, C. H. Candler, Preston S. Arkwright, Mrs. Asa Warren Candler, Robert L. Cooney, Arthur Harris and the sections in and around Emory University, Lullwater Parkway and Fernbank. Fernbank, the 75-acre estate of the late Colonel and Mrs. Z. D. Harrison, is one of the beauty spots of the Druid Hills section, and has been unspoiled by cultivation, and today remains the wooded and beautiful spot that it was years ago. Only five miles from the heart of the city, its wooded area presents a scene foreign to its neighboring estates.

Mrs. Robert L. Cooney, general chairman of the festival, also past president of the Peachtree Garden Club and the honorary president of the Garden Club of Georgia, announced last night that there would be a committee at Fernbank each day during the festival to direct visitors through the grounds.

A luncheon at the Druid Hills Golf Club and a repeat performance of the dance pageant completes the Saturday program. All churches will use dogwood blossoms for their Easter services.

BIRTHDAY MARKED BY HORSE GUARDS

Banquet Features 56th Anniversary Celebration.

Fifty-sixth anniversary of the Governor's Horse Guards is being celebrated by that social and military organization this week.

To mark the birthday and also completion of the unit's annual federal inspection, members entertained at a banquet Tuesday. Adjutant General Jack Stoddard, Major Theodore Goolsby and Fulton County Commissioners Troy Chastain and Gler Hailey were speakers. Captain Wesley U. Moran presided. The horse guard was organized by Captain John Milledge.

J. H. HIRSCH, 63, DIES AT RESIDENCE HERE

Was Well-Known Businessman and Member of Pioneer Atlanta Family.

Jake H. Hirsch, 63, vice president and director of the Simmons Company, died Tuesday night at the residence, 222 Lullwater road, N. E., after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Hirsch was a member of a pioneer Atlanta family, his parents, Morris and Mrs. Amelia Hirsch, coming to Atlanta shortly after the War Between the States. His father, with two brothers, Henry and Joseph Hirsch, established the Hirsch Clothing Company here many years ago.

Mr. Hirsch was widely known in business and civic circles of Atlanta. More than 30 years ago he established, with his brother-in-law, Hugo Spitz, the Hirsch-Spitz Manufacturing Company, which in 1929 was purchased by the Simmons Company.

He was a member of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, Standard Club, English Club, Hebrew Benevolent Congregation and civic organizations.

Surviving are his wife; a son, Jack Hirsch; a daughter, Mrs. Henry Hess, both of Atlanta, and three sisters, Mrs. Hugh M. Spitz and Mrs. Irene Smith, both of Atlanta, and Mrs. Monroe L. Bickart, of New York.

Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the chapel of Sam R. Greenberg with Dr. David Marx officiating. Burial will be in the family plot in Oakland cemetery.

Palbearers and honorary escort will include Harold Hirsch, M. L. Hirsch, M. R. Hirsch, Joe Hirsch, Sig Montag, Sig Samuels, Sidney Wellhouse, R. J. Cantwell, Alfred Myers Sr., Dr. Glenville Giddings, Dr. Charles Giddings, L. B. Lillenthal, Lawrence M. Fox, Aaron C. Hess, Bertram Maler, B. Ehrlich, Nat Ullman, Ralph Rosenbaum, Sig Guthman, Harold Montag, Jerome Herman, John Herzfeld, Louis Aronstam, Ralph Herzog, M. F. Hogg, W. E. Launius, H. W. SOLONS ARGUE OVER FLORIDA CANAL

Witnesses Revive All Pros and Cons on Waterway.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—The military value, economic feasibility and geological effects of a trans-Florida canal continued in controversy today before the senate commerce committee.

Witnesses revived virtually every argument used for or against the $200,000,000 waterway during the years it has been under debate.

With more railroad witnesses and geologists to be heard, the committee called another session for Friday morning.

Senator Vandenberg, Republican, Michigan, said today the committee stood 11 to 9 against the canal. Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, admitted the vote would be close, but predicted the project would get a favorable committee report.

POLICE CHIEF, 2 AIDES FACE TRIAL IN ALBANY

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ALBANY, Ga., April 5.—Three Albany police officers tomorrow night will face trial before Mayor W. J. County Contracts To Aid Charity, Civic Institutions

Commissioners To Purchase $150,000 in Services in Lieu of Donations.

Fulton county commissioners will contract for about $150,000 of services from Atlanta and county charitable, educational and civic institutions, it was decided yesterday.

Representing the county's legal staff, Pope F. Brock, gave commissioners a written opinion that the county in almost every instance could enter into a contract on the basis of research already made, and added that in other instances the legal studies will be continued.

The latest opinion was believed to have eliminated every major objection raised several days ago when the staff ruled the county could not make lump sum donations. Immediately there was considerable concern as to whether many of the institutions could continue to function.

Aid to the Atlanta Freight Bureau, for which $5,000 was put in the tentative budget, was still in doubt. Brock said he has not yet found "any legal basis for a contractual relationship."

The expected large influx of persons interested in the various charities failed to materialize. Commissioners referred the entire question to a special committee of Troy Chastain, chairman of the finance committee; the county attorneys and the firm of Respass & Respass, county auditors.

Among other major actions of the commission were:

1. Adopted an ordinance establishing regulations governing subdivisions outside incorporated areas in the county. The program was submitted by the newly established Fulton County Planning Commission, headed by Robert L. MacDougall.

2. Extended an invitation to the 1940 convention of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia, to meet in Atlanta, and voted

A New Definition Of Planning Body

The special house economy committee, charged with investigating of state government costs heard a new definition of the state planning board yesterday.

Cleveland Rees, of Webster, committee member, inquired why the board has participated in drawing up an expanded budget for the state parks division for the next biennium.

"The planning board," observed Vice Chairman James V. Carmichael, "is a board set up to find more and better ways to spend money."

to attend the 1939 meeting at Savannah May 8-10.

3. Engaged in a short debate concerning a proposal to pay four county employees the salaries carried by the new jobs to which they have been promoted, which would have cost the county $1,200 a year not included in tentative budgetary listings.

4. Heard Mayor Harris, of College Park, and a delegation ask county aid in establishing a new paid fire department to supplant the present volunteer system. College Park asked $150 a month for salaries. The matter went to the finance committee, for further study.

5. Enacted a 25-mile an hour maximum speed limit on Peachtree road from the city limits to Peachtree Battle avenue.

6. Received a pledge of co-operation from William E. Mitchell, chairman of the Board of Public Welfare, in the county's announced intention to determine the physical condition of 500 on unemployable relief rolls. County doctors will make the examination.

Brock's new opinion followed an oral one he made last week and specifically exempted contributions to Carnegie Library, the Atlanta airport, care of juveniles, Grady hospital, Battle Hill sanatorium and the Albert Steiner clinic from the formality of any contracts.

Thirteen charitable and civic organizations, however, to which the county had listed appropriations in lump sum amounts, must qualify on a contractual basis if the county contributions are made legally, Brock added.

The specific opinion concerning the contracts follow:

"In our opinion, the following conditions will have to be met in order to make this procedure legal, to-wit:

"(1) A contract should be made by the county with every such charitable institution which is to be used for the performance of these services by the county. No gift, contribution or lump sum appropriation can be made.

"(2) The contract should stipulate that some person authorized by the county shall supervise in a reasonable way the selection of the persons to receive help from the county, in order to insure that the beneficiaries are eligible under the law for county aid.

"Among other limitations to be observed is the one that Fulton county is under a duty to care for needy persons resident in this county only.

"(3) The contract should also provide specifically for the daily, weekly or monthly cost of the services to be rendered. In other words, county authorities, rather than the private institutions, should exercise the discretion as to the amount of assistance to be given to the particular individual. Inasmuch as it cannot be ascertained at the beginning of the year what number of persons are to be given assistance or what the needs of such persons will be, you are not authorized to appropriate in advance a lump sum to be paid to any particular charitable institution."

Brock warned that while the budget law does not become operative until 1940, it will become relevant to these matters then "in an indirect way, especially if any of the results prohibited by the act should be brought about by unauthorized appropriations."

New Sewer Crew Perfectly Legal --But Fund Isn't

Employment of a crew of men to work on lateral sewer lines has been authorized by the city of Atlanta but if they work, they will not be paid, it developed yesterday.

Council Monday adopted a resolution to employ the crew of workers under the supervision of the sewer division of the construction department, with the stipulation that their wages be paid out of the "lateral sewer fund."

Assuming that the finance committee had approved the measure, Hartsfield signed it along with other council papers.

Not until B. Graham West, city comptroller, investigated and found there is no such item as the "lateral sewer fund," was it revealed that jobs for the men had been set up with no legal provision for paying them.

West said until council and the budget commission formally act to appropriate money for the workers, he will not pay the salaries.

Relieve Misery Of Itching Skin

Don't scratch and claw itching skin. This tends to irritate and spread inflammation, and is dangerous. Skin itching, when due to Scabies, Eczema, Ringworm, Athlete's Foot, Surface Rash, or Insect bites, is relieved by applying Tescutan, a quickly palliative preparation that acts with surprising speed to kill every parasite it encounters and your itching goes quieting away. Recommended for the baby's tender skin. Test it for yourself. Get it at your dealer's or direct from Tescutan Co., Dept. 2, Savannah, Ga. (adv.)

WHICH of these ways Suits YOU Best?

☐ PLAIN NOTE—Loans are made on nothing but your name signed to a simple note.

☐ ENDORSEMENT—Loans are made on your note endorsed by some friend or relative.

☐ AUTOMOBILE—Loans are made quickly—we pay your parking check in the Forsyth Building Garage while you come to our bank.

☐ FURNITURE—Loans are made on household furniture and you can even phone us to come to your house for your application instead of your coming to the bank.

☐ STOCKS-BONDS—Provide ready security for loans and terms are most desirable.

☐ DIAMONDS—And other stones and jewels of value are good security for loans.

☐ COMBINATION—Loans are made on a variety of collateral when you want a large amount and any one type of your security is insufficient to secure the loan. For instance, you might put up an automobile plus an endorsement if the car is a model worth less than the amount you need.

☐ OTHER TYPES of loans are made on most anything of value.

Terms are extended as long as 2½ years if you need that long. Loans can be renewed, increased, or rearranged when you need further accommodation.

As little as $4.17 a month repays each $100 borrowed.

$50,000 SUIT FILED
BY TROLLEY VICTIM*Georgia Power Named by Mother of Child.

Suit for $50,000 was filed yesterday against the Georgia Power Company as a result of the accident March 23 in which James Dorsey, 21-month-old son of Mrs. Hugh M. Dorsey, was injured. The mother filed the action in behalf of the son, whose right leg was severed at the thigh and whose left foot was cut off when a street car struck the youngster. Negligence and speeding are charged to the operator of the trolley in the suit. Mrs. Dorsey, who lives at 798 Fulton terrace, says the child eluded her and was headed across the tracks to a playground when it was the victim of the accident.

SITES ARE CHOSEN FOR PLANE FLOATS*Called First Step To Encourage Flying.

Three seaplane floats will be established along the Georgia coast in the near future, as the first step to encourage and develop seaplane flying in this section, Captain Ralph S. Fogg, seaplane specialist of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, said here yesterday. Captain Fogg will leave this morning to inspect proposed sites for the floats at Savannah, Brunswick and Sea Island. The floats will be built and installed by the National Youth Administration, from plans prepared by the CAA's airport section, together with wind cones and mooring facilities. The floats can be built in single units, or a series of units, if larger bases are desired.

RESERVIST AT BENNING LOSES MAIL CAMPAIGN

LOS ANGELES, April 5.—(P)—Municipal Judge Joseph L. Call maintained his office today with re-election over an infantry reserve captain now in training at Fort Benning, Ga., who campaigned for the judgeship by mail. A count of 2,516 precincts from the balloting yesterday showed Call had 117,686 votes to 52,607 for the reserve captain, Lee Stanton.

BRIARCLIFF PLAZA
BUYS LAST PARCEL*Construction of Community Center Will Start in Near Future.

With the purchase Wednesday of the old Dr. Robin Adair home place on Ponce de Leon, the last parcel of land upon which Briarcliff Plaza is to be erected, has been secured. On the property is a two-story structure occupying a lot 100 feet on Ponce de Leon and extending back 180 feet. It was bought from the Robin Adair estate, through the Trust Company of Georgia, by Relnac, Inc., for a cash consideration of $15,000, Perry Adair announced.

This now gives to the developers of the proposed $300,000 community center, at the corner of Ponce de Leon and North Highland avenues, a total frontage of 351 feet on Ponce de Leon. Work already has started on razing the buildings on the property, which include a large apartment on the corner. As soon as the demolition is complete, work will begin on the group of 20 or more stores, and other improvements, including a community theater.

Already leases of more than $100,000 have been announced, and the following additional leases, amounting to $31,500, were announced yesterday by Adair: Concession adjoining Bick's bowling alley, leased to Henry C. Taylor; a shop to Holcomb's florist, a laundry and dry cleaning pick-up branch to Dupree Cleaners, and a modern market space to the Georgia Fruit and Vegetable Company.

RETRIAL ORDERED IN PERJURY CASE*Lowndes Conviction Held Not Warranted by Facts of Trial.

The Georgia court of appeals yesterday ordered a new trial for J. Y. Stokes, of Lowndes county, convicted of perjury and sentenced to four years' imprisonment.

The court held evidence showed Stokes had sworn out a misdemeanor warrant against B. T. Bentley in a case involving asserted stoppage of payment on a check.

A Lowndes county superior court jury held Stokes had sworn falsely in making his charge. The court of appeals, however, held Stokes could not be convicted of committing perjury if he swore to something he believed true at the time, even though such charge later was proved false.

The court ruled Stokes "did not knowingly testify falsely" in the case and ordered Superior Judge W. E. Thomas, of the southern judicial circuit, to grant a new trial.

POSTAL RECEIPTS IN HAPEVILLE GAIN

$2,514 for Quarter Is $536 Over '33 Period.

Hapeville postal receipts totaled $2,514.92 for the quarter of the year just ended, a gain of $536.50 over the same period of 1933, Postmaster W. R. Conine reported yesterday.

The gain was the second consecutive quarterly increase registered by the Hapeville station. The Hapeville post office was elevated to second from a third-class station last January, when the year's receipts amounted to more than $10,000. City officials are now trying for federal funds for the erection of a post office building. The present station is in leased quarters.

DECATUR ROTARY
ELECTS NEW HEAD*J. W. Battle Will Take Office July 1.

J. W. Battle, executive manager of the Decatur Building & Loan Association, yesterday was elected president of the Decatur Rotary Club, succeeding Dr. J. Sam Guy. He assumes office July 1.

Other officers elected were: Clyde Z. Walker, vice president; R. J. Holt, secretary-treasurer; Dr. E. Fred Scott, sergeant at arms; Captain H. Turner, assistant sergeant at arms. Dr. Guy, J. Howell Greene, J. Farmer, R. F. Sams Jr., Battle, Walker and Holt were named to the board of directors. The Decatur club is the only Georgia Rotary club which has had 100 per cent attendance at five meetings this year, Dr. Guy announced.

Headaches
Eased in a Hurry

When you have one of those annoying, nerve-racking headaches (or painful neuralgia) you can trust "BC" to give you relief in a hurry. "BC" is composed of several quick-acting, prescription-type ingredients, carefully blended, that are commonly prescribed by many physicians. These ingredients function together to produce a delightfully soothing effect in the shortest time. If you have never used "BC," please try it and see if it doesn't give you relief in a few minutes. Try it also for muscular aches, simple nervousness, discomfort due to simple head colds or functional periodic pains. Get "BC" in 10c and 25c sizes for the 3c dose at fountain and make the test for yourself. By comparison, we believe you will prefer it for the relief of pain and discomfort due to functional disorders. (Adv.)

MERCY REFUSED FOR ARNOLD ALLEN*Macon County Man Convicted of Killing Mother.

The State Prison and Parole Board declined yesterday to recommend mercy for Arnold E. Allen, Macon county man convicted of beating his mother to death. The state contended Allen beat his mother fatally because she refused to give him her $18 old-age pension check. Neighbors found her bruised wandering near her home. She died in a Montezuma hospital. Governor Rivers who has final decision in all capital punishment cases, may accept or reject the recommendation. About four-fifths of the cheese produced in the United States is the relatively mild cheddar cheese.

ECONOMY PROBES HINT SHARP CUTS IN PARK PROGRAM

Division Director Is Closely Questioned on Operations; Urges More Money for Expansion.

By The Associated Press.

Drastic curtailment of Georgia's park program was hinted last night by the house economy committee as it pressed forward in an investigation of the State Department of Natural Resources.

Questioning Director Charles N. Elliott, of the parks division, on expenditure of approximately $87,000 last year, the committee indicated scant sympathy for proposals of an expanded system and reminded the official funds were

2 Silver Dollars Keep Official in 'Dough'

Joe Gregg Jr., executive secretary to Mayor Hartsfield, will never go broke so long as he holds to a resolution he made more than 30 years ago.

Gregg then resolved always to have money. He secured two silver dollars, which he has carried in his pockets every day since.

"Before I got those two silver cartwheels, I often was 'stone,' he said. "Since I began carrying them, I have never gone broke that I had to spend either of them."

He estimated that the two heavy coins have worn out far more than $2 worth of pockets during the long interval.

needed for more important services.

Choice of Importance.

"I think," said Vice Chairman James V. Carmichael at one point, "that Georgia has just about reached the point where we are going to have to choose what is most important and what is least important, and then decide to support the most important services."

Later Carmichael asked Elliott: "Don't you think it's about time for Georgia to check up a little bit and say 'whoa!'"

Specifically, the committee indicated intention to suggest consolidation of educational and publicity functions, elimination of legal and engineering service which could be obtained as needed from the attorney general's office and highway department, and curtailment of state park development.

Protests by Elliott that the parks service is an expanding program which should be supported by increased, rather than decreased, budgets, Chairman Wilmer D. Lanier remarked dryly:

"Yes, and remember there are 21,000 school teachers who aren't getting paid."

Indication of internal dissension in the department was contained in testimony by Elliott concerning his relations with R. F. Burch, commissioner of natural resources. (Previously Burch complained he had not been consulted on personnel.)

Asked if his appointments of employees had approval of the commissioner, Elliott replied: "We put it (the names) on the budget and send it in there. We put it on his desk. I assume he sees it."

Later, Elliott testified he did not "sit down and go into detail" of the budgets with Burch, and reiterated he assumed the commissioner examined the budgets and noted names of new employees. "Then," snapped Lanier, "you figure as long as he doesn't find out about it, it's okay?"

Elliott did not reply.

No Employee Reductions.

"How many employees have you eliminated in the last three months?" asked Representative Rees, one of the committee.

"There hasn't been any change in personnel since July 1, 1938," replied Elliott.

An attempt by the committee to recall Commissioner Burch for further questioning was balked by a message from the latter that he had been ordered to the hospital by his doctor as result of "recurrence of an old ailment."

The message said he would not be available for several days.

Operation of the division of mines, mining and geology under direction of Captain Garland Peyton drew praise of committee members.

The geologist said his division had spent approximately $50,000 in the last two years while being instrumental in helping bring new industry valued at $10,500,000 into Georgia.

Three Time Zones Proposed

End to Nation-Wide Confusion Suggested to President Roosevelt by Resident of California.

The movement to remedy Georgia's time situation—where two-thirds of the state is on eastern time and the other third on central standard time—gained impetus yesterday.

A Hollywood motion picture cameraman has sent a letter to President Roosevelt, outlining a plan to eliminate time's irregular flights over the nation, including Georgia's present farcical zoning.

The photographer, Karl Struss, proposed three time zones be established across the country, instead of the existing four.

Struss proposed that all the territory east of the Mississippi river be in eastern time and that central time go to the western borders of New Mexico, Colorado and cutting through Helena, Mont., to Canada. All west of that line would be Pacific time.

Large Central Zone.

Struss emphasized that none of the proposed zones would be as large as the existing central zone, in which one-third of Georgia now finds itself. He advanced a further advantage that re-zoning would align various sections of the country more correctly in relation to sun time.

The photographer's idea struck him following a recent experience while on location in the California desert, near Yuma, Ariz. Struss found it necessary to go to Yuma and back across California to reach camp.

The distance was only a few miles. Yet the points were separated by an hour's time difference, such as Atlanta, which is on central time, and Lawrenceville, which is only 30 miles from Atlanta, yet an hour later in time.

Aid to Business.

"It occurred to me," said Struss, "that it would be much simpler and better if time zones were on a more natural basis. Digging into the situation, I discovered there is not actually three hours sun time difference between Los Angeles and New York. Thus the reduction of time difference would be a big aid to business."

Struss also outlined as advantages to be gained from his proposal that, by giving more leisure hours to workers, amusement and allied industries would benefit, and that since more workers would drive home during daylight hours than they do now, driving would be safer.

Summing up, Struss explained that under his plan, no state except Montana, would have two time zones, where there are now 18 such states.

ARMY DAY OBSERVED.

COLUMBUS, Ga., April 5.—Army Day was observed last night by Charles S. Harrison post, American Legion, Lieutenant Colonel Robert E. Turley Jr., C. A. C., an instructor at the Infantry school, was the principal speaker.

cannot combat it by strict isolation, "a policy that would make us so decadent that we would be an easy prey for any nation that chose to attack us. And we can be invaded," the colonel emphasized.

To protect us from invasion, Colonel Dawley recommended a standard army, with suitable to our needs, reserves to fit possible needs, unity of government, and reserves of war material, enough to immediately equip forces adequate for protection.

The speaker was introduced by Brigadier General James H. Reeves, retired after an invasion by Brigadier General Asa Singleton, commandant at Fort Benning.

Present in addition to members of the order were Major General Stanley D. Embick, corps area commander; Major General George Van Horn Moseley, retired, former corps area commander, and Major Phil Brewster, commissioner of the state department of public safety.

Members of the order adopted a resolution to present a citation and a medal to their annual dinner each June to the year's outstanding member of the Georgia State Highway patrol. Major Brewster accepted the offer, and thanked the order for their cooperation and appreciation of the work of the patrol.

ARMY ORDERS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Army orders today included:

Colonel Kerr T. Riggs, C. Panama Canal Department, to Kansas City, Mo., to attend conference.

Lieutenant Colonel: Matthew J. Gunn, Inf., Knoxville, Tenn., to Atlanta, Ga., to attend conference.

John S. Wood, Jr., Fort Des Moines, Iowa, to Atlanta, Ga., to attend conference.

Major: F. W. Fort, Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., to Pleasanton, Cal.

Bertrand Morrow, C. Fort Knox, Ky., to Atlanta, Ga., to attend conference.

George R. Barker, Inf., Gainesville, Fla., to Atlanta, Ga., to attend conference.

Herman F. Kramer, Inf., Berlin, Germany, to Fort Benning, Ga.

Elmer C. Stanfield, C. Fort Riley, Kan., to Fort Oglethorpe, Ga.

the letting of state aid projects simply means the money which would go to pay for such lettings will be that much toward meeting that deficit for the quarter."

Road department officials mailed disapproval notices yesterday to some 80 employees in the first move to put Governor Rivers' budget order into effect, but declined to discuss the extent of the reduction in fourth quarter activities.

No School Funds Available.

Previously it had been estimated the Governor would slash around $2,000,000 from the road department budget for the three months beginning April 1, placing the unexpended money in the stabilization fund where it would be available for other departments.

In another budget action, the Governor yesterday notified the school department none of the $3,162,112 requested for commencing schools would be available because a previous loan of $2,181,000 had been made against anticipated revenue for the quarter.

The law concerning penalties for diversion specifies they may be invoked where more money is diverted from highways than was diverted in 1934. Officials said Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the Bureau of Public Roads, already has warned the state of the danger of losing road grants, but declined to comment on possibilities in the Governor's "cut to the bone" program.

RIVERS ORDER HALTS ALL BUT 2 PROJECTS

Governor Rivers' executive order halting state-aid highway project letting exempted only two jobs: widening three bridges on the Irwinton-Dublin road in Wilkeson county and placing a bridge over a slough near the Canoochee river on the Ways-Clyde road.

These projects will be let April 21, as originally advertised.

The order explained the Wilkeson county project should be completed to close out a federal aid job and the Bryan county work to close a gap and prevent the necessity of double maintenance.

Three other state-aid projects were advertised on April 21 letting, but they were not excepted by the order: They were:

Grady County—4,942 miles of surface treatment on the Cairo-Pelham highway beginning at the present paving near Barrett's creek and ending at the Grady-Mitchell county line.

Colquitt-Cook Counties—14,908 miles of construction of a public toll base double surface treatment, and one bridge, beginning in Moultrie and extending eastward to a point near the Colquitt-Cook county line.

Meriwether County—Reconstructed topsoil base 9,545 miles from Meriwether-Troup county line and extending to Greenville, with cut, sutter and side walks in Greenville.

Engineers estimated all five of

J. M. NORMAN FOUND DEAD IN HIS HOME

Small Rifle Discovered Near Bedside of Atlanta Manufacturer.

J. M. Norman, 52, for many years a sheet metal manufacturer in Atlanta, was found dead in his bed yesterday morning at his winter residence on St. Simons Island.

A 22-calibre rifle was found by the side of the bed.

A coroner's jury which investigated the death returned a verdict of "death by a 22-calibre rifle by methods and means unknown to the jury."

Two other guns, unloaded, were found in the room. Oil and rage near-by indicated that Mr. Norman had been cleaning the weapons.

Native of Augusta.

A native of Augusta, Mr. Norman came to Atlanta as a boy of 17. He learned the trade of sheet metal worker and for many years was connected with the firm of Norman, Dowman and Dozier.

In 1931, when that firm ceased operations, he organized the firm of Norman, Romer and Bowles, with headquarters on Murphy avenue, Oakland City, and remained its active head until ill health forced his retirement in the summer of 1934.

Mr. Norman then established a home on St. Simons Island and had lived there until the time of his death.

Surviving are his wife; two sons, J. M. Norman Jr. and Barry Norman, of St. Simons Island, and one sister, Mrs. S. Percy Gentry, of Atlanta.

The body will be brought to Atlanta today. Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

held at the fort at 11:30 in the morning, and the second battalion of the 22d infantry will parade at 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Major General Stanley D. Embick will be host at a luncheon at 1 o'clock in his offices in the federal building. Invited are army and navy officers in Atlanta, officials of the federal, state and city governments and the national guard, and officers of patriotic organizations.

During the day, the detachment of army planes stationed at the municipal airport will fly over the territory within a hundred-mile radius of Atlanta.

Ceremonies will be brought to a close at 7:30 o'clock tonight with a military band concert and talk on Army Day over WATL. Major David A. Blakecock will make the address. Last night, Lieutenant Colonel J. T. Axton made a radio talk on army activities in the Atlanta area.

Speaking before the Atlanta chapter of the Military Order of the World War yesterday, Colonel Ernest J. Dawley, instructor in field artillery at Fort Benning, told the members uniting in government was the best defense against internal as well as external threats to the tranquility, peace and prosperity of the nation.

The order is the sponsor and originator of the Army Day observance.

The country is threatened internally by "isms," the colonel said, which are "bred by cunning, sired by greed, out of avarice, and nursed by opportunists."

Outwardly, we are menaced, and the Highway Department's allocated funds.

The Governor explained the Highway Department submitted a fourth-quarter budget requesting an allowance of $4,063,214.34 and said available revenue for the period showed it would receive only $2,043,000.

"That would mean a deficit of $2,020,000," he continued, "halting

Assembly Not To Be Blamed for Closing of Schools, LaGrange Jurist Declares; Solons Commended for Courage at Recent Session.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
CARROLLTON, Ga., April 5.—Vigorous denunciation of administration extravagance, and a stirring defense of the state general assembly today had marked a charge to the Carroll county superior court grand jury by Judge Lee B. Wyatt, of LaGrange.

heading for disaster unless this wild period of extravagance is halted. The pouring of more revenue into the governmental coffers is not accomplishing the improved moral, social and economic conditions intended.

The plan to "soak the rich" and ease the burdened poor, he said, is not working out. "A public debt is mounting by the minute, appalling in its vastness," he said. Judge Wyatt said that "in America today we are getting away from the worship of God and are making the dollar king. Not until we dethrone the dollar and place back honesty, morality and sane and fair business methods can we hope to prosper."

BALANCED ECONOMY URGED BY WATKINS

Atlanta Describes Freight Rate Battle, Warns of Too Much Industry.

The south must maintain an even balance between agriculture and industry after it has secured freight rate equalities with the rest of the country, Edgar Watkins, counsel for the Southeastern Governors' Conference, declared yesterday at a meeting of the Atlanta Civic Club.

fered by the north and east in the freight rate fight and expressed confidence the south would win its battle. Referring to the general outlook for the south, he said: "With our unjust artificial handicaps removed, and a wise administration of our immense natural resources, we are justified in entertaining an optimistic view of our future."

AMERICAN GOLD AND HITLER

One of the most serious, and direct, threats against the United States by the Nazi government of Germany is one generally ignored by the man in the street. In fact, it is doubtful if the average American citizen even realizes such a threat exists.

This threat is the result of a group of conditions, all interwoven and all, to great extent, interdependent upon each other.

In the first place the amount of gold held in the United States is such that it is a virtual monopoly of the precious metal upon which world currency values are based. The United States now has stored some $15,000,000,000 in gold.

Germany has little, if any gold. A small amount, seized at Prague, may assist German trade and finances for a short time, but not for long. Germany has a public debt of more than $11,000,000,000.

Germany has already indicated it intends to attempt to demonetize gold. That is, to force all currencies off the gold standard. A Hitler-esque phrase is to be the basic excuse for this; "good leadership is a better cover than gold for currency."

Such a move by Germany means a determination to permanently conduct international trade on a straight barter basis. Which would make all America's gold worthless in world finance and international commerce; would make it of no more value or importance than so much lead.

In another view, the German monetary proposals may be taken as an ultimatum to the United States, saying, in effect, that unless this country redistributes its gold among the nations of the world—making outright gifts of the metal—then Germany plots to take that gold worthless.

For years the State Department at Washington has sought to persuade the rest of the world to wage active commercial war on the German barter system. The department has warned that, if not stopped, Hitler economics would utterly destroy world commerce. Today that prediction has come sufficiently true to be upheld. There is little world commerce left, except in armaments and the necessities for war.

The United States has more than an idealistic interest in the struggle of Europe between democracies and dictatorships. The United States has a very material stake in that struggle. For, if the Hitler plans are permitted to come to completion, if he gains the world control and domination he envisions, it may well mean economic ruin, and serfdom to Nazi masters, for American commerce. This, whether or not we act with other democracies to curb the wild man of Berlin before it is too late.

TAXING THE PEOPLES' RECREATION

Within the past few years, despite the stubborn necessity for economy in the family budget, people have become conscious, as never before, of the vacation advantages to be found in the national parks and shrines.

The ensuing vacation months are expected to establish new records in the number of visitors. More people will take to the road, whether by automobile, train, bus or boat. There will be few, indeed, who will not somewhere in this broad land visit one or more of the nation's playgrounds which congress, from time to time, so wisely set aside for the perpetual enjoyment of all the people.

However, the privilege of enjoying these advantages to the full is in immediate danger of an unexpected and uncalled-for setback. The Department of the Interior, which has spent hundreds of thousands of dollars of the people's money urging them to visit the places reserved for their enjoyment and paid for with their money, now proposes to charge admission for the privilege of entering the gates.

"From the very inception of the national parks and monuments of historical importance," says Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, "it was proposed to preserve these outdoor areas and shrines as public domain. Now, when these great travel objectives are drawing millions of motorists annually, it is proposed to erect toll gates and ticket windows in virtually every section."

When a department of the administrative branch of the government, with questionable authority to do so, attempts to assess the people for the maintenance of facilities which have already been paid for out of the peoples' taxes, it is time for congress to take a hand in the matter. Parks and shrines should forever remain free to all the people of the nation. To charge admission would be assessing a tax against the public welfare.

TO BE PREPARED

With the approval by President Roosevelt of the $380,000,000 air defense bill, the United States moved another step away from the path which proved so dangerous in the years from 1914 to 1917.

The measure will almost treble the strength of the Army Air Corps by providing 6,000 ships for this vital arm of American defense. It also will bolster defenses at the Panama Canal at a cost of $23,750,000 and provide $34,500,000 for the education of vital American industries in their wartime duties.

It is a measure of preparedness every citizen hopes will never be called upon for use, yet one which cannot be neglected because of mere hope in a world gone mad with the frenzy of arms. Hope is not enough when liberty is at stake. Common sense must dictate the degree of protection necessary for the preservation of that liberty in the face of threats, from whatever source they may come.

The signing of the bill represents the greater knowledge derived from the experience of the first World War. It may prove the step that will save the United States from the horror of the second World War. In the years from 1914 to 1918 this country viewed the conflict in Europe with complacency. In 1916 it became evident to many the United States could not avoid entanglement in the crucial struggle. A half-hearted effort was made toward making this country ready for that eventually. But it was not enough, and the entry of the nation into the lists was marked with an almost hysterical effort to get men and supplies across the waters before the collapse of the Allied armies.

America wants, more than ever, to avoid being drawn into the ideological collision now speeding toward tragedy on the continent of Europe. But America cannot be sure. America cannot know the threat to this country will not be redoubled by swift aggressor gains. For that reason America is preparing and for that reason America must remain prepared. For a strong America can withstand the impact of criminal nations and concepts. A weak America cannot enforce respect, cannot survive under liberty.

It might be said that America in 1939 is facing the facts of life with a new determination. Costly as it may be, the defense program is not only necessary, but imperative. It may be worth a million times the cost during the years to come, of which no man can read the course. It gears American defense to the needs of the moment and for the eventuality of possible future involvements.

ARTIST OF THE LENS

Georgia has ever lent itself to the artists of the world; to the word portraitist, the painter and the poet. Of late years, to the photographer. There is a haunting beauty to the forests and the mountain brooks of Habersham, to the Piedmont plains, the coastal marshes of Glynn, the staid streets of Savannah and the watery wastes of the Okefenokee swamp that has ever attracted those who paint—whether with words, with brush, or with film.

Of the many, few have caught the spell of Georgia's loveliness as well as Kenneth Rogers, whose photographs from the pages of The Constitution will form a goodly part of the Georgia exhibit at the New York World's Fair. He has combined the breadth of artistic instinct with the sure, deft touch of a newspaper photographer into lens poems of lasting beauty. He has snared beauty from realism, for the photographer cannot gloss over the ugliness of life by subterfuge or disregard.

Through his eyes, the millions at the World's Fair will see Georgia—a Georgia that, whatever might be its material faults, is as unforgettable to a Georgian as are the glens of Scotland to a Scot.

It is seldom one finds opportunity to praise the work of a newspaper photographer. They are, in all truth, the unsung heroes of the profession, content with an agreeable credit line where the reporter they have assisted garners the glory, if any there be. The opportunity at hand, it is all the more pleasant to call attention to their work. They translate Georgia for the world in all its incomparable beauty.

The opposition to the great paperhanger has about decided that a map of Europe in one color would be monotonous.

In the present state of millinery, extra precautions must be taken next Sunday not to put the Easter basket on for the hat.

If his people can get along without Adolf, and the world can't get along with him, the matter takes some thought.

'Editorial of the Day'

GROWING PROBLEM

(From the Baltimore Sun.)

The President's three-point program to deal with the problem of migrant labor has been revealed only in outline; but that outline leaves it open to suspicion of having missed the main point. The three suggestions offered are:

Settlement of the migrants now in California and other states who can become self-supporting where they are now.

Return of those who are willing to go back to their home states.

Resettlement of other migrants in areas where employment suited to their abilities could be found.

Apparently each of these envisages fixation of the migrant, which is to say, the abolition of floating labor. But this involves something very much like the abolition of California agriculture, at least in its present form, for its methods are based on the presumption that there will always be a supply of floating labor available at harvest time. The trouble is that while California needs 175,000 itinerant hands she actually has probably 250,000 and tends to accumulate more.

Even in Maryland, berries and fruits are gathered by migrant labor, and every year we see our share of homeless wanderers. As a writer in the April number of Fortune points out, this problem is not altogether the creation of drought. A great deal of it results from the increase of power farming, and some economists think that as the use of machinery spreads, the larger part of 1,800,000 farm tenants in the south are destined to be thrust upon the road.

The President has been told that there are 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 migrants drifting about the country now. That they raise serious social, political and economic problems is evident to anyone who has talked with them or has inspected one of their camps. These are frequently appalling from the sanitary point of view; but these people are living so close to the starvation line anyhow that it is idle to expect them to do anything but.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

HISTORICAL COMPARISONS

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The last three weeks in Europe have left the more susceptible State Department officials gray and haggard. The cables pouring across their desks have told an unbroken tale of impending disaster—until three days ago, when several American embassies first reported a "detente," which is just a diplomat's word for a breathing spell. Yet, from all the work and all the worry, the State Department men have got nothing more positive as to the future than two historical comparisons.

The first is decidedly gloomy, being a parallel between the present, when the British are preparing a stiffened resistance to Hitler, and the dark days in May of last year, when they seemed to be doing the same thing. Then, it will be recalled, Hitler made his first really threatening gesture in the direction of Czechoslovakia. Then his demand was only for the Sudetenland, yet for one week end, at the close of May, war seemed imminent. The British took a high tone. The French chimed in. The Czechs themselves were more than obstinate.

So Hitler went off to Berchtesgaden—"went underground," as one official put it at the department. What followed thereafter was too well remembered. While the first determination of his enemies was slowly disintegrating, Hitler set his plans in his Berchtesgaden burrow. October 1 was chosen as the final date after which the Sudetenland must become German. The forces of disintegration within Czechoslovakia were fostered, while the forces of compromise in France and England were carefully cherished. And in the end came Munich.

THE CONJURING TRICK

The parallel was offered as casting light on the possible future behavior of Hitler, not of the British and French. The best State Department opinion is that the British commitment to defend Poland has given a rude check to the German Fuehrer. But the same opinion holds that the check will probably not be permanent. In fact, he is now thought only to have "gone underground" again, to make ready a new assault, while his victims, so he hopes, worry themselves and debate themselves and wishfully think themselves into a new readiness to be assaulted.

"Even if the British and Poles work out a permanent arrangement, even if Rumania is positively to be supported, we expect to have to wait three or four months to see whether it will all stand the test of Hitler's next real move," it was said at the department. Though his chances are much slimmer, the Polish setup is not so very different from the one which Hitler took in his conjuring trick with the Czechs. Within Poland there were the same minorities, the Ukrainians to the south, the Germans in the corridor and northern provinces, which will serve Hitler's turn in causing disunion. Meanwhile, in England and France, even at the very moment when the commitment of support was offered Poland, some of the same old voices were raised for "settlement by negotiation."

ELBA AND WATERLOO

Taking it altogether, the force of the State Department's first historical comparison depends on that of the second, which is a parallel between the present and the time, more than a hundred years ago, when Napoleon finally convinced the English that he vitally threatened their interests. Until that moment, the English government had alternated efforts to resist with efforts to "appease" the Emperor. After that moment, the English policy was to ally with Austria, Russia, Portugal and Prussia slowly were constructed, and the result was, first, Elba, and then Waterloo.

The circumstances now are less favorable to England than they were in 1807 and 1808. True, France is now on England's side, but the Russia of Stalin is a far less acceptable ally than the Russia of Tsar Alexander. Half the Hapsburg empire is in Hitler's hands, and Hungary is being gorged into insensibility by spoils. Gold counts for less than it once did, and the same industrial revolution, to quadruple her population, decuple her wealth, and make her war debts look like little money. But these considerations do not affect the basic question, which is whether England really means her change of heart, as she meant it toward Napoleon.

In answer, officials at the department shrug their shoulders. It is positively stated that the first rumors of cabinet controversy over the Polish commitment were incorrect. The department is confident that both the English cabinet and the English people for the present stand united behind Chamberlain in his new position. But, on the other hand, there are those voices already speaking for "settlement by negotiation." They may grow stronger.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

You may wonder, now and then,
Why the very best of men
Like to try the sort of thing
They should not do:
But the best horse on the range
Sometimes longs for pasture change,
And forbidden fields are greenest,
Ain't that true?

Really Brighter.

The turn-out of work from this particular office really should be brighter, today. For the windows have been washed. The sun has gone from the panes and the outlook is so much better it is like a different world outside. At least that portion of it to be seen, a block or two of street, a viaduct, a few buildings and a railroad depot. With that advertising signs here and there.

Which turns thoughts to the hope that, some day, the railroad gash through the heart of Atlanta may be closed and the smoke from locomotives disappear from the city scene. Really, I've never understood why we can't do away with that smoke. Some railroad men have told me, "impossible." But it always sticks in my mind that other cities don't suffer as does Atlanta, even though railroads run beneath them, or through them. And what is possible for one is possible for another.

Just as I've never understood why we can't have more taxicabs on the streets of the city. All the arguments and excuses about costs of operation and so forth make no dent, when other cities, with ten times as many cabs in ratio to population, are recalled. They have them, why can't we? And it is the question of rates, either. You'll never form the taxi habit among any people when there aren't taxicabs available, any time they are desired. Even if you could ride free.

But, To Smoke, Again.

However, reverting to the smoke situation. The boys in charge of cleaning the windows tell me that it is impossible to keep them free of scum because of rainy weather, smoke, Atlanta's dust or something, any time of the year. They seem to have the same complex we all have when it comes to washing a car. What's the use? It'll rain and splash mud again, tomorrow.

But, still, we do have the car washed periodically. It seems to me the problem of the Atlanta window cleaners of the future will be much easier—when the viaduct chasm is covered and when electric locomotives, or something, replace the smoke belching behemoths that now pollute our air.

And it'll be easier on all our pocketbooks, too. Think of all the white suits and dresses that have to make extra trips to the cleaners. In the summertime, because of the smoke and that belches forth and hangs over the downtown area like a pall.

And don't forget the buildings that have to be cleaned so frequently, if the pristine beauty of their stonework is to be seen.

A Young

Psychologist.
Young daughter in a certain home I know revealed, one day, that she is a budding psychologist. That is, according to the story her dad tells. Remarkable the young lady to her mother, the other evening:

"I've discovered, at last, why you and Dad married. You were so dumb you thought he was smart. But, really, he isn't. He's even dumber than you. So he was dumb enough to believe you had good judgment and to accept your appraisal of his ability. And he was flattered. So he fell for you, easily. That's all there was to it. Isn't the perspicacity of the high school age remarkable?"

Wonder what reason her daughter will give for her marriage to whoever her husband turns out to be?

Twenty-Five

Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Monday, April 6, 1894:
"Washington, April 5.—Absolute prohibition will prevail in the United States navy after July 1 next. Secretary Daniels tonight made public a sweeping order, which not only will abolish the traditional 'wine mess' of the fleet, but will ban all alcoholic liquors from every ship and shore station of the navy."

And Fifty

Years Ago.

From the news columns of Saturday, April 6, 1889:
"A syndicate composed of Atlanta capitalists and moneyed men of the east is now trying to buy out the Atlanta Street Railway Company. An offer has been made for the system."

A FINE SERVICE.

H. W. Rohrer, executive secretary of the State Council of Y. M. C. A. of Georgia, reports 15,685 students in 133 Georgia High schools having enrolled in the voluntary Bible study this year, using as a basis of their study an admirable booklet, entitled, "Seven Steps Towards Christian Maturity," prepared by Charles E. Ford. I have read the booklet with much interest and quite, and I rejoice to think of 15,000 young Georgians studying this splendid outline of Bible instruction under capable leaders.

I was impressed with a statement on the fly leaf of this booklet by Edward Howard Griggs, which reads:

"One aim worthy enough to integrate the whole educational process and give each part its rightful place and meaning is the development of positive and effective character. Everything else in education but character is tools and equipment; and these must be interpreted in terms of the character, using the tools. Knowledge, education and skill may equally serve bad as well as good ends."

Among the topics emphasized in this series of Bible studies are: Study Habits, Respect for School and Civic Property, Personality Appreciation, Attitude Towards Discipline, Pride in Workmanship, Cheating—A Form of Theft—and Daily Schedule. These topics are dealt with quite frankly and di-

Cancer War

By HUGH S. JOHNSON.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5.—When I was passing the tambourine for funds to fight infantile paralysis in New York city, I said: "The fight against cancer goes on under good organizations that have raised millions. But as yet, we have no defense against infantile paralysis."

Some of my friends in the fight against cancer protested this. Their point was that whereas the cancer death rate runs up around 112 per 100,000, infantile paralysis kills only about one per 100,000, and also that the American Society for the Control of Cancer gets only about $200,000 a year. Incidentally, our final report will show more than that of that from New York city alone, in the polo drive.

Now infantile paralysis is no pet of mine any more than is cancer, and I certainly do not want to get into any contest about the relative demerits of these two human scourges. Still, I think my statement was justified. Polio is a cripple rather than a killer, so comparative death rates don't tell the story. On the other point, the polo drive was also for funds for research, for which there is little available. For research in cancer there is available about one million dollars a year in addition to the money raised by the American Society. So the "have raised millions" seems accurate enough. I would be the first to say that they don't have nearly enough and that the fight against cancer needs more money than that against infantile paralysis.

Ignorance Far be it from me to belittle cancer. When it gets beyond control it is one of the most hopeless and agonizing of human ills. It is the second deadliest of all killers—in deaths only by a heart disease. It takes double the number destroyed by tuberculosis and far more than its nearest deadly rival, pneumonia. The tragic aspect of cancer is that a great part of the mortality and suffering is due to popular ignorance about the disease. If treated early, from 70 to 95 per cent of cases are cured. If allowed to run into later stages, the chance of cure drops to nothing in cancer of the bladder to 30 per cent in skin cancer—the easiest to cure.

Nobody can diagnose or treat cancer but a competent physician. Quack salves and ointments only lose the time that may take a case from the curable to the incurable stage.

Cancer is not hereditary. You do not get it from eating or drinking. You can't "catch" it from another person. There is no more social reproach in having cancer than in breaking an arm. The only rule that people should know and practice to avoid its evils are: To avoid constant irritations to any part of the body, to keep clean, to have a doctor look at once at any irregular discharge of blood from any natural opening of the body, and also at any bump or dark mole, wart, thickening, sore or blister that seems to be getting worse or bigger, and, above all, to be examined physically by a doctor at least once a year—especially those over forty.

To Spread This is no health warning. I have been asked by the American Society for the Control of Cancer to help spread this warning. The President, by proclamation, has also asked the press to do the same and has set April apart as a month for everybody to co-operate in the state and national programs for the control of cancer. The most important public part in those programs is to impress upon everybody the very simple rules just stated.

It seems a little thing and yet my rule is that, if this information were known to and acted upon by everybody, it could prevent hundreds of thousands of cases, tens of thousands of deaths and untold suffering every year. That is no little thing.

rectly, with Scriptural references that bring to bear God's teachings on the everyday tasks of life. Space does not permit detailed quotations of the many passages of Scripture in each of the chapters, but I may illustrate the committee has done its work. The chapter is on Study, and these Scriptures are employed as the basis of the lesson: "For their sakes, I sanctify Myself," John 17:19, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed," II Timothy, 2:15; "Study to be quiet and to do your own business, to work with your hands," I Thessalonians 4:11. And the passage in Matthew 10:39 is used as illustration of Christ's words to His followers concerning the spirit and purpose of their Study and Work.

A code developed by a group of high school boys and girls who have attended these classes is published at the close of the booklet. I cannot quote the code in full for lack of space, but I commend it to young people everywhere, and you may secure a copy of this booklet by writing to H. W. Rohrer, Peters building, Atlanta.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

"MANNED AND READY" Try as I will, I cannot get the proper lead to this column of today. In the first place, it is being written in the late afternoon. That is the usual time, but the difficulty is that at midnight your correspondent boards one of Captain Eddie Rickenbacker's planes and when The Constitution appears at your breakfast table, your correspondent will be in Brownsville, Texas. There was the matter of a date line, which isn't important, and the matter of trying to correlate material and time. Which is difficult. In the afternoon there will be Mexico City.

The fact that one may board a plane at midnight and eat lunch the next day in Mexico City does, however, give some little slant on the terror and fear which grip England and France and, for that matter, all the nations of Europe.

Our plane will go innocently along, the invisible horses of the engines pulling it across the sky at great speed. There will be no great bombs suspended from beneath these planes, weighing 500 pounds and filled with explosives which will, when detonated, kill and maim for a distance of a quarter mile. There will be no men at machine-gun turrets in the wings, watching the skies for possible enemies. The pilot will not be straining his eyes seeking a tell-tale light on the earth which will give some clue to a city that is to be bombed. We will pass over cities where men, women and children sleep. Whatever their fears, they are not of death falling from the skies; they are not fears of their children being blown to bits; their houses shattered; their neighborhood a shambles.

The 12 hours to Mexico City could be less. That is cruising speed. The six hours to Brownsville could be less. It is about 1,800 miles to Mexico City.

All of which may explain why England had "manned and ready" her anti-aircraft defenses yesterday and the day before at a threat which had come in through "the intelligence."

WHILE IN EUROPE

You see, one may get on a train in Berlin, not a special train, at 9:40 o'clock. This you what a fast bombing plane, cruising at 240 miles an hour, could do!

One may leave Paris at 10 in the morning and, including a channel passage, be in London in late afternoon.

One may leave Copenhagen, Denmark, at 10 o'clock in the morning and, including one long ferry jump, be in Berlin that evening for dinner. It is but a short distance from Frankfurt to Paris. It is only a brief time by air from Frankfurt to London.

If, for instance, a plane left a German airport by the time a man and his wife entered a fashionable restaurant on the Strand or at Oxford Circus, the plane could be dropping bombs on England by the time they had enjoyed a leisurely dinner and were sitting back with the coffee.

It is a living sort of terror. If the inflamed brain of the German dictator should so explode as to order planes, they would be dropping bombs on English cities, including London, before there was the slightest warning.

That is why the morale of the English people is shaken. You may say that Berlin, too, would be bombed. Yes, but not as effectively. And, after all, what is Berlin from a standpoint of psychology? And what if Westminster and the houses of parliament be blown down, where then is the English government? In so far, of course, as psychology is concerned.

BUT, WHAT OF MADRID?

Did you ask them, of Madrid? And say that the war there proved planes cannot destroy a city or the morale of its people?

The answer is not that. Not yet has an industrial power, with its great array of planes, unleashed an air attack. The attacks on Madrid were by a few planes as compared with what would be loosed in Europe.

The English industries, concentrated in Manchester, in Birmingham and about London, are in rows and are concentrated in these areas. One good plane attack, if successfully produced, would severely cripple them if, indeed, it did not halt them.

The first World War saw a few puny planes. Captain Eddie Rickenbacker, in command of the flight which begins soon after this is written, was America's ace. The bombers in those days threw overboard bombs by hand. Some of them were made of old bottles filled with nails and scrap iron.

England, of course, would do some bombing of her own. But England would suffer most. Thousands of men and women and children would die.

So, the masters of England are willing to appease and to play poker—even the chips do belong to someone else—until some way can be found to bring the war to a halt.

I think perhaps Hitler has reached the peak—that he will, perhaps, get Danzig or the Polish corridor—but perhaps not even that. If he checked then it will be war or we again will have a demonstration of the old adage:

"Every revolution eats its own litter."

For the first time in the history of Atlanta, pontifical enactment of the magnificent Holy Week services of the Catholic church is being observed here.

Services are being held at the new Co-Cathedral of Christ the King, erected after Pope Pius XI named Atlanta a cathedral city, with the rights of full pontifical ceremonies. The public has been cordially invited to attend.

The solemn pontifical masses of Holy Thursday, and Easter Sunday, as well as the Mass of the Presanctified on Good Friday, will be celebrated by the Most Rev. Gerald P. O'Hara, D. D., J. U. D., bishop of Savannah-Atlanta.

Masses To Start at 10:45.
This morning's and tomorrow's masses will begin at 10:45 o'clock, and the pontifical Easter mass at 11 o'clock. Solemn blessing of the fire, the paschal candle and the baptismal font will take place at 7 o'clock Saturday morning, while solemn high mass will be sung by the Rev. Charles McBenet, O. M. I., at 8:30 o'clock that morning.

Bishop O'Hara will also preside over Tenebrae, to be held at 8 o'clock tonight and tomorrow night, and will officiate at the Stations of the Cross at 3 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Rev. Joseph E. Moylan, V. F., rector of the co-cathedral, will conduct the service of the Three Hours Agony tomorrow from noon until 3 o'clock.

HEALTH CLINIC SLATED.
MONROE, Ga., April 5.—Dr. Ernest Thompson, health commissioner of Walton county, will hold a health clinic for children in the schools of Walton county this month. Children will be examined for defects, and diphtheria, toxoid and smallpox vaccine will be given when desired. Typhoid shots also will be given to those who want them.

Agnes Scott Students To Elect Class Officers for Next Year

Girls Will Cast Ballots Today in Choosing of New Leaders
From Group of Nominees Selected
Last Week.

Agnes Scott students go to the polls once again today to choose class officers for next year. Each class will elect its officers from a group of nominees made last week.

The freshman nominees are: For vice president, Bee Bradfield, Charlotte, N. C.; Betty Ann Brooks, Decatur; Gay Currie, China; Lolla Marshall, Charlotte; Virginia Montgomery, China; Jane Taylor, Baton Rouge; for secretary-treasurer, Bee Bradfield, Suzanne Kaulback, Atlanta; Jeanne Osborne, Atlanta; Mary Robertson, Charleston; Frances Tucker, Laurel, Miss.; Annie Wilds, Hendersonville, N. C.; for representatives on the executive committee of student government, Betty Ann Brooks; Billie Davis, Brazil; Mary Lightfoot Elean, Bainbridge; Anne Gellerstedt, Atlanta; Suzanne Kaulback, Yemassee; Virginia Montgomery, Jane Taylor and Frances Tucker.

Next year's junior class has nominated for vice president, Florence Ellis, Monroe; Ann Henry, Macon, Helen Klugh, Atlanta, and Mary Madison Wisdom, Atlanta; for secretary-treasurer, Freda Copeland, Brunswick; Ann Henry, Betsy Kendrick, Suffolk, Va.; Ida Jane Vaughan, Jenkins, Ky.; for members of the executive committee, Martha Boone, Elkton, Ky.; Nina Broughton, Hackensack, N. J.; Ann Henry, Betsy Kendrick, Ann Martin, Marion, S. C.; Martha Moody, Plant City, Fla.; Louise Musser, Charleston, W. Va.; Pattie Patterson, Charlotte, and Mary Madison Wisdom.

The new senior class will select for vice president from Frances Abbott, Louisville, Ga.; Carrie Gene Ashley, Ellenton, S. C.; Marjorie Boggs, Shreveport; Louise Sullivan, Decatur, and for secretary-treasurer, from Carrie Gene Ashley, Anne Enloe, Dillsboro, N. C.; Mary Frances Moore, Monroe, La.; Louise Sullivan. The senior class has no members on the executive committee except the officers of student government and the house presidents of the underclass dormitories.

school teachers. Their pay has been raised—and Editor Frederick Sullens, of the Jackson Daily News, commented that they have put on weight—becoming weight-since their last convention. With better pay they were eating more and buying more in Jackson. Still another probable explanation of Jackson's fine looks lies in the Fifth Annual Farm Chemurgic Conference there last week. In the great business of finding new commercial uses for old farm products, of joining agriculture to industry by the miracles of modern chemistry, Mississippi seems to be leading all the southern states.

At the same time, as the presence and appearance of the school teachers suggested, Mississippi is not permitting herself to forget those wider sciences without which the applications of chemical and mechanical science will be insufficient—social, economic, political science, and—greatest of all—educational science.

Mississippi may go wrong a hundred times in immediate years to come but the great thing about the state is that it is on the go, that it is in motion, and that its determination upon motion in the right direction is going to get it there sooner or later. To be the poorest state isn't so bad if it makes you also the state most determined not to be poor. Those who name Mississippi the poorest state can never prove it, of course, because the state is so largely agricultural. Agricultural wealth and income are not capable of comparison on any exact basis with industrial or commercial wealth and income. The fact that the Mississippi farmer sees less cold cash in the course of a year than the New Jersey mill worker does not necessarily mean that he is poorer. Farmers who raise their own food and feed have less use for cash than mill workers who must pay for everything they consume.

Mississippi is not so poor, perhaps, as some of the national statisticians make her out, but Mississippi is poor and Mississippi knows it. It is this admission of poverty and determination to be done with it that is Mississippi's greatest asset.

Mississippi has, also, some very good habits. One of them, according to Editor T. M. Hederman, of the (Jackson) Daily Clarion-Ledger, is the habit of having a great American in the United States senate practically all the time. We can agree with him that Pat Harrison is indeed a great American. And so was John Sharp Williams. And LeRoy Percy. And L. Q. C. Lamar. And Jefferson Davis.

RECREATION HEADS WILL MEET TODAY

Southeastern Conference Meeting Will Be Devoted to Professional Problems.

The Southeastern Conference of Municipal Recreation Executives will begin its annual three-day meeting at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Imperial hotel, with Arthur H. Jones, southeastern representative of the National Recreation Association, presiding.

The convention will be devoted entirely to discussion of professional and technical problems of the municipal recreation executives including the relation of city recreation systems and city schools; relation of federal aid to municipal programs; methods of interpreting programs; recreation in housing projects; and the development of a comparative appraisal chart for the cities in this area.

Executives attending will be taken on a tour of the Atlanta city parks tomorrow afternoon by George I. Simons, general manager of the city parks department.

NEW DURBIN MOVIE TO OPEN AT FOX

"Three Smart Girls Grow Up"
Is Starring Vehicle.

Deanna Durbin opens today in "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" on the Fox theater screen today.

Deanna became a full-fledged star with her first picture, "Three Smart Girls." It was followed by "100 Men and a Girl," "Mad About Music" and "That Certain Age." Preview audiences say "Three Smart Girls Grow Up" is the best of the five.

Directed by Henry Koster, who directed "Three Smart Girls" and "100 Men and a Girl," the current offering is a happy reminder of Deanna's first film. It presents approximately the same cast—Deanna, Charles Winninger, Nella Walker, Nan Grey and Ernest Coats, with the addition of Helen Parrish, Bob Cummings and William Lundigan. It will present Deanna as a slightly older, younger who tries to straighten out the tangled love affairs of her sisters.

Leaving from Winder, the group will visit Williamsburg, Va., Norfolk, Va., Baltimore, Md., the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and Washington, where they will visit other points of interest.

New Drugs Save Atlanta Youth In Disease Fight

Newly-discovered drugs performed a modern miracle—and so John Whitmire, 16, brilliant high school student, comes home smiling today, victor in a long battle against two of science's rarest and most dreaded diseases.

"It seems too good to be true," he said as he returned from Columbia, S. C., where he was stricken 21 months ago with osteomyelitis, a bone infection, and staphylococcus, an infection of the blood stream.

Five physicians attended Whitmire and helped him conquer the ailments. His case records include two operations, three blood transfusions and use of such recent drugs as protosil, alomoloin and sulfanilamide.

When Whitmire was first stricken with the blood infection, his fever rose as high as 105 degrees. After his first operation, his entire body below the waist was encased in a plaster cast.

Now he walks with a cane. Doctors say the left knee may never bend, and, in no case should an attempt be made to flex the knee in less than five or six years.

While Whitmire fought the diseases, he also studied. He attended the high school at Columbia for seven months, winning a place on the honor roll, one of 25 students out of a total enrollment of 1,300.

He attended O'Keefe Junior High and Boys' High schools here. He lives at 1222 Boulevard, N. E. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Whitmire.

MONROE HIGH SENIORS TO GO TO WASHINGTON

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MONROE, Ga., April 5.—Twenty-one members of the senior class of Monroe High school will leave Tuesday for their annual pilgrimage to Washington, D. C. The trip this year will be under the chaperonage of Miss Rea McConnell, sponsor of the class of 1939, and will include five days of sightseeing.

Leaving from Winder, the group will visit Williamsburg, Va., Norfolk, Va., Baltimore, Md., the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and Washington, where they will visit other points of interest.

Speakers will be Charles Carroll, district manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company; John Harland, manager of John Harland Printing Company; Lewis Dugger, head of the statistical department of the Coca-Cola Company; James Doran, treasurer of Davison-Paxon Company; Miss Kathleen Watson, director of the Community Employment Service; Herbert Armstrong, of Gottschaldt-Humphrey Advertising Agency; Ralph Ramsey, executive secretary of the Georgia Educational Association; Miss Ruth Moore, of Rich's, Inc., and Miss Ruth Campbell, of The Atlanta Georgian-American.

FI. FA. COMMISSION PROPOSAL VETOED

Hartsfield Maintains 25 Per Cent Payment Is Too High.

Action by city council to turn over 1938 tax f. fas., to collectors in the office of the municipal revenue collector was vetoed yesterday afternoon by Mayor Hartsfield.

Council approved a tax committee recommendation that the f. fas. on taxes due since October, 1938, be given to 15 collectors who would receive 25 per cent of the amount they gathered on f. fas. of less than $150 each.

"It is my opinion that paying 25 per cent for the collection of taxes not more than six months past due is far too high," the mayor declared, as he vetoed the measure.

He indicated that the legal liens would be withheld for a short time and possibly turned over to the collectors at a lower percentage rate later.

Hartsfield signed all other council papers.

SENATORS DISMISS INDIANA VOTE TEST

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—

The senate elections committee voted unanimously today to dismiss the election contest brought by Raymond E. Willis, Indiana publisher and a Republican, against Senator Van Nuys, Democrat, Indiana.

Willis, who opposed Van Nuys for re-election last year, had charged that the Indiana Democratic machine coerced voters and forced state employees to contribute to what is called "The Two Per Cent Club." He contended that he actually won the election, and asked a senate investigation.

COMPROMISE SEEN FOR RELIEF FUNDS

Senate Appropriations Committee Approves $100,000,000 Measure.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—Administration forces and economy advocates in the senate joined today in a compromise agreement to support an emergency relief appropriation of $100,000,000.

A bill providing this amount—$50,000,000 less than President Roosevelt had requested—was approved unanimously by the senate appropriations committee after a series of cloakroom discussions. The senate is scheduled to take it up tomorrow with approval apparently assured since most Democratic and Republican members have agreed to vote for it.

The $100,000,000 figure already has been approved by the house. It is designed to supplement an emergency appropriation of $725,000,000 appropriated by congress to carry WPA through the fiscal year ending June 30.

Administration lieutenants in the senate worked to obtain a compromise on $125,000,000, but Senator Adams, Democrat, Colorado, and other economy advocates rejected that figure.

Among the Democrats, only Senator Pepper, Democrat, Florida, voiced a demand for the full $150,000,000 appropriation. Pepper said the measure to that figure on the senate floor.

"The President knew what was needed when he made his request," Pepper said. "Nothing has happened since to change the need."

Both administration lieutenants and Democratic economy bloc senators were reported to have been motivated toward compromise by a desire to avoid party dissension. The economy group had threatened to try for a reduction below $100,000,000 if administration forces sought to increase the figure.

The appropriations committee said in its report on the bill that $45,000,000 of the appropriation should be "saved" for the fiscal year beginning July 1. This sum might help tide the WPA over in the event congress had not enacted another relief bill by June 30 for the next fiscal year.

Survey of Schools Pledged

He Keeps Books on Safety "Savings Bank"

State Department Is To Make Study To Attain All Economies Possible in Their Operation.

A survey by the State Department of Education, designed to investigate possibilities of reducing school expenditures, was pledged yesterday by the State Board of Education.

The board, acting on a request from the house economy investigating committee, adopted a seven-point program looking to economies in local systems. The program included:

1. Reduction in transportation costs;
2. Consolidation of small schools with large schools;
3. Elimination of overstaffing of schools;
4. Consolidation of high school grades in junior or two-year high schools where enrollment does not justify employment of at least two high school teachers;
5. Elimination from the state teacher payroll of clerks or assistants for county superintendents, supply teachers or any other such persons as are not necessary for carrying on the school program;
6. Economies in administrative offices of county and city boards;
7. Consolidation of high school grades in senior schools where enrollment does not justify hiring at least four high school teachers.

Power over Budgets.

Dr. M. E. Thompson, assistant state school superintendent, told the economy committee the state board would take recommendations from the survey and seek to enforce them by withholding approval of local budgets or taking other necessary steps to economize in the 1939-40 fiscal year.

The 30-day survey will be made by supervisors and other members of the State Department of Education.

Governor Rivers suggested at the joint session of the economy committee and state board on Tuesday that Georgia's seven-month school law be amended to grant the board authority to require consolidations when necessary for economy.

Headquarters of the Georgia Education Association announced returns from a survey showing 21 representatives were favorable to an extra legislative session to raise additional school funds. Four were favorable with reservations and no senators replied, the G. E. A. said.

Entrenkin, chairman of the Chattooga county teachers' organization, which is conducting the poll in that section, said at Summerville yesterday it was "getting encouraging results."

"We are asking all school officials, teachers and parents to join us in this worthy undertaking," Entrenkin said, "and help make it 100 per cent."

"It should not be necessary for any legislator to need encouragement to return the pledge, because all clear-thinking persons know that our school financial breakdown has been made for the county, and legislators are the doctors duly elected by the people as their representatives to find solutions to problems of the state."

Entrenkin added that no teacher suits would be filed in Chattooga county, and that arrangements had been made for schools of the county to complete the present term. Many schools have closed short of the full term because of a lack of funds.

School Developments.

Developments in the school situation throughout the state yesterday included:

CHATSWORTH.—The Murray county board of roads and revenues met and transferred $3,000 of W. & A. rentals to the board of education to assist operation of county schools another month.

SPARTA.—Hancock county board of education met in regular session and made survey of school situation in the city and county. Members were at loss to know how schools will operate unless state solves financial problem.

TIFTON.—S. F. Mitchell, chairman of the city board of education, announced teachers in city schools had been issued checks paying them in full to April 1.

EATONTON.—Putnam county board of education met and announced that unless county commissioners donated more than $2,150 of the $7,500 they received from W. & A. rentals for courts and schools, county schools must close at the end of eight months. Commissioners will consider the matter today.

DAWSONVILLE.—Dawson county board of education announced schools will continue to operate until end of regular term, through aid from the board of roads and revenues.

CAMILLA.—White teachers of Mitchell county will receive 85 per cent of normal salaries for the eighth month of the school term and remaining fund of $13,000 appropriated by the board of commissioners will be pro-rated according to the county salary schedule. It was announced following meeting of county board of education, school trustees, principals and teachers.

$2,250,000 in Two Years Is Estimate of Traffic Expert of Police Department.

Atlanta motorists have saved two and a quarter million dollars during the last two years by reducing the city accident rates, according to statistics compiled by Patrolman M. L. Thomas, police supervisor of safety education. The savings are in money spent for medical treatment, hospital bills, property damage, funeral expenses and wage losses following traffic mishaps.

The report reveals that in the years 1935-36, 163 persons were killed in accidents totaling an expense of $7,335,000. In 1937 and 1938, the fatality toll was reduced to 116 and losses to $5,210,000.

The increase in traffic safety has brought a 10 per cent decrease in automobile insurance rates. This factor alone saves Atlanta motorists $200,000 per year.

Patrolman Thomas compiled his statistics by the same method used by the National Safety Council and the Georgia Department of Public Safety.

The compilation is based around the fatality total. Figures show that for every traffic death, there have been from 35 to 50 persons injured, and from 135 to 150 property damage accidents. Financially this means that for every traffic death there is represented an expense of $45,000.

In 1938 Atlanta's traffic death rate was 30.3, placing the city third from the top in its population class. In 1937 the rate was brought down to 21.0, a ranking of fourteenth. Last year the ranking was substantially the same.

Officer Thomas pointed out that the safety education department since its organization in 1937 has been trying to show the public the benefits of careful driving.

"These figures," he said, "illustrate that safe operation not only will save lives but automobile expense. Saving lives and economy are strong arguments for careful driving."

As head of the safety education department, Patrolman Thomas is in charge of the school boy patrol, an organization of 600 students in city schools. The young patrolmen assist traffic policemen in guarding school crossings.

The patrol was organized three years ago by Captain Jack Malcolm, head of the traffic department and the Atlanta Motor Club, which furnished the uniforms.

Yesterday Patrolman Thomas called a meeting of the patrol for Saturday morning at the Capitol theater to discuss a trip to New York, May 17. Approximately 400 members are expected to make the journey.

Fisher announced that several members of the local association were planning to attend the centennial program at Durham, N. C., April 21-23.

BAPTIST CONFERENCE CONDUCTED IN FORSYTH

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

FORSYTH, Ga., April 5.—Representatives from 22 associations of the Georgia Baptist Convention heard Dr. L. R. Scarborough, of Fort Worth, Texas, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, speak yesterday at a regional conference held here.

Other speakers included Dr. J. E. Dillard, of Nashville, Tenn., secretary of promotion, S. B. C.; Dr. A. Chambliss, of Fort Valley, president of the Georgia Baptist Convention; Dr. James Merritt, of Atlanta, executive secretary, Georgia Baptist Convention; and J. L. Fortney, manager, Georgia Baptist Orphans' Home, Hapeville.

Dr. Spright Dowell, president of Mercer University, with 24 ministerial students, attended. Others from the faculty of Mercer included Dr. W. A. Keel, Dr. E. M. Highsmith, Dr. John D. Freeman and Dr. Anthony. In addition to 42 pastors in attendance, there were 102 laymen.

INSTITUTE PUSHES RURAL LIBRARIES

Project Cited as Aid to Modernize Lincoln at Session Here.

Somewhere in the rural south there may be modern Abe Lincoln still reading their few books by dim lamp light, waiting for a spark to arouse latent ability.

This realization has animated sessions of the Institute on County and Regional Library Service this week at Emory University. And the 84 southern librarians attending are convinced rural libraries may serve as the spark.

Already their efforts have made headway. Four years ago in Georgia there were 115 counties without free library service. Today the number has been reduced to less than 32, and with the advent of traveling libraries and the coming of rural electricity, farm children are discovering a new opportunity to learn.

Continuing the general theme of the meetings, three nationally recognized authorities will present on today's program practical suggestions to bring library facilities to these modern Lincolns.

Miss Essie M. Culver, president-elect of the American Library Association and executive secretary of the Louisiana Library Commission, will open the program at 10 o'clock with the last of her four talks. She will instruct the delegates in how to build an informed public opinion for rural libraries.

At noon Miss Edith M. Gantt, of the federal library service division, will speak on the adult education program in the larger library unit. Another representative of Washington, Morris E. Storer, of the AAA, will talk on the organization and administration of rural study groups.

Designed to study problems of library service over rural areas, the institute will close tomorrow with discussions by Miss Gantt and Miss Mary U. Rothrock, supervisor of libraries with the TVA, Knoxville. Dean Tommie Dora Barker, of the Emory Library school, is directing the institute.

SCHOOL BOARD RE-ELECTS.

AMERICUS, Ga., April 5.—The city board of education this week re-elected its officers, and all white teachers in the city school system were re-elected for another year. C. H. Barker is president of the board, and S. C. Hadcock is superintendent of city schools.

English Villagers Get Real War Scare

TRUSTHORPE, Lincolnshire, England, April 5.—(UP)—The inhabitants of this village rushed from their homes in alarm today, sure that war had begun, when an airplane dropped a bomb in an adjoining wheat field which exploded with a roar.

Investigation revealed that the bomb, which narrowly missed the village, had fallen accidentally from one of numerous Royal air force planes passing over this district.

COX HEADS HOUSE BLOC DEMANDING INQUIRY INTO NLRB

Georgian Accuses Board of Favoring Employes Over Employers, Regardless of Evidence.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(UP)—Ignoring pleas of party whips, conservative house Democrats joined hands with Republicans today to demand a comprehensive investigation of the National Labor Relations Board.

Representative Eugene E. Cox, Democrat, Georgia, veteran leader of the southern conservative bloc, excoriated the board in an hour-long speech, accusing it of favoring employes over employers, regardless of evidence in disputed cases.

"It is even claimed," he said, "that the board, and its various employes, have used the opportunities and authority of their official position to promote the organizing efforts of the Congress of Industrial Organizations against pre-existing unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

Cox hinted broadly he would withdraw his insistence upon an investigation if the house labor committee would "promptly open hearings on proposed amendments to the Wagner act." Thus far the committee has yielded to administrative wishes and refused to authorize hearings, which have been demanded by the AFL and a score of business-industrial organizations.

The Georgian thrust his proposal before the chamber as a bitter battle waged in the influential subcommittee over the resolution of Representative Arthur C. Anderson, Democrat, Missouri, to appropriate $50,000 for a sweeping inquiry into operation of the NLRB.

Cox heads forces in the committee which seek to force a favorable recommendation on the resolution, which calls for a thorough probe into the fitness of NLRB administrators, the board's part in diminishing or increasing labor disputes, and desirability of amending the Wagner act. A joint committee of 10 investigators would conduct the inquiry.

SOFT COAL PARLEY STILL AT IMPASSE

Committee of 8 Operators, UMW Officials, Announce Adjournment.

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP)—Another day passed without an agreement between the soft coal operators and the United Mine Workers of America in their parley to end the suspension in the soft coal industry.

The committee of eight operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America announced merely that adjournment had been taken until 10 a. m. tomorrow.

Many of the mines, union officials said, do not work on Good Friday. They said it was unlikely even if an agreement were reached tomorrow that operations, suspended Monday in the Appalachian area where there are 338,000 miners, would be resumed before Monday.

The week's suspension would mean a loss in wages of about $10,000,000, union officials and operators estimated. Stoppage followed expiration of the old contract last Friday.

Major Berry Voices Opposition To Changes in U. S. Fundamentals

Head of Printing Pressmen's Union Assails 'isms' as Threat to Democracy; Lashes Undermining Principle of Private Enterprise in Address Here.

Opposition to "any change in the fundamentals of American democracy" was voiced vigorously here last night by Major George L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants Union of North America.

Major Berry, a former United States senator, spoke at a dinner given him by Locals No. 8 and No. 10, at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

"I support practical improvements," he said, "but not one step backward nor one step forward if it be in the direction of undermining the principle of private enterprise that constitutes the foundation upon which democracy rests."

Besides members of the union, in the audience of more than 250 persons were representatives of other printing trades crafts, printers who employ workers, newspaper publishers and representatives of city, county and state governments.

Following his introduction by J. Sid Tiller, former president of the Atlanta Federation of Trades, and Assistant Union of North America, Berry began his address on a warning note.

"It is a mistake, and perhaps the most dangerous one we have known, to disregard the uncertainties and tumults throughout the world," he said.

"There is no time to be lost in taking an inventory not only of our state of mind, but to inquire, 'What are we going to do about it?'"

"There exists a challenge to intelligence and courage the equal of which has never been known in the history of modern society. The subjects to be considered transcend the so-called class aspect of American citizenship and, too, go beyond the individual status of our fellow countrymen."

"Our involvements are of such nature as to require unity upon the part of all men in all walks of life."

Referring to the fact he came to Atlanta to consult with leaders of the organization as well as those who are engaged with them in the production of printed matter, both in the commercial and newspaper fields, Major Berry said:

"I am profoundly pleased with the presence here of so many who represent the managerial and investor category who are associated with labor in the conduct of these business enterprises."

"Whether we like it or not, and notwithstanding the existence of a feeling on the part of some, there nevertheless exists an inseparable community of interests between the investor, management and labor in the conduct of business."

"It is by the degree of goodwill, co-operation and fundamental understanding of the problems of industry that its stability and its prosperity can be determined."

"Neither one of the three human factors—investor, management and labor—has any right to extract from industry more than he himself puts into it. To me, this philosophy represents the idealism of democracy."

Pointing out it was the initiative, pioneerism and talents of free Americans in the conduct of industry and agriculture which has made this country great in the comparatively short space of 150 years, Major Berry continued:

"I am exceedingly proud of the accomplishments of our country. I believe in the order that has made it great. With all of its weaknesses, all of its defects and with all the inequities and inequalities that exist, and there are many of them, they nevertheless fade into utter insignificance by comparison with the accomplishments that are of record and which are known to all of us."

Touching upon Nazism, Fascism and Communism, Major Berry said:

"The even casual observation of these 'isms' is sufficiently clear to indicate them as instrumentalities of slavery, and a complete reverse of the order we know—namely, freedom and democracy."

"By the same token that water and oil cannot mix, neither can Fascism or Communism mix with democracy."

"For this reason, I associate myself with the philosophies of our democratic forms of government in resisting to the last degree the imposition upon America, by law or by administrative edict, of a system that contemplates the deviation from or diminishment of freedom, our right to ownership of property, and interference in the conduct of our business and social lives—all of which are constitutionally guaranteed to us."

Suggesting a bulwark against encroachments of "isms," the speaker went on:

"The safest and surest defense we can establish for our protection is in the recognition of our mutualities in the conduct of our private enterprises."

"The co-operative relationship between the investor, management and labor is sufficient to resist

Science Takes Drudgery Out --- Even in Still Hunting

Flying over hidden mountain valleys of north Georgia, internal revenue agents easily spot the column of smoke that means a still in operation. Then they notify their ground force cruising in a car connected with the plane by a two-way radio, and another still is as good as destroyed. The new air-land combination is credited with approximately 800 successful raids monthly.

STILL RAIDERS USE PLANES AND RADIO

For both to understand the location of a still once it is spotted from the air.

"It is the most effective method yet devised," one official said, asking that his name not be used. "The poor devils don't have a Chinaman's chance. Our observer spots them from the air, radios the nearest scout car waiting below and guides the agents to the scene of operations."

The ground force, sometimes equipped with hand radio sets to be taken along with them after leaving the cars, swoops down on the stills before the operators are aware of having been observed, the officials said.

According to the same source of information, the air observer and pilots never bother with dead stills, those not in operation, although many of these are spotted. They only want the live ones going full blast.

"What we want," it was explained, "is the people running the stills."

System Works Fast.

Under the old system one raid in a given region was the signal for all operators to close down. A blast of dynamite often destroyed all trace of the still before the agents arrived, leaving nothing but the strong and familiar fumes

SOIL IMPROVEMENT INCREASES OUTPUT

Upturn in Cotton Production Over Old Methods Are Cited by Brown.

Increases in the yield of cotton and corn crops in Georgia during 1938 as the result of soil improvement programs inaugurated by the Georgia Agricultural Extension Service were reported yesterday by Walter S. Brown, of Athens, director.

Cotton produced in "one-variety" communities had an aggregate value of $1,569,152 more than would have been realized under the old method. There was no additional cost. Yield of corn was 11.5 bushels per acre last year, as compared with a five-year average of 9.7 bushels per acre, Mr. Brown said. The work of agricultural experts with soil improvements being responsible for the increase in production.

Director Brown also reported that 748 purebred beef-type bulls and 441 purebred beef-type heifers had been placed on Georgia farms during 1938, the result of bringing purebred sires into the state being shown at district fat cattle shows where six of the eight grand champion animals were Georgia-bred.

GOODWILL VALUE IN BUSINESS CITED

Coca-Cola Company Executive Addresses Ad Club.

The value of goodwill in business relations with the public was stressed by DeSales Harrison, vice president of the Coca-Cola Company, in an address yesterday before the Atlanta Ad Club.

Speaking on "The Human Touch in Business," Harrison told of the methods used by his company in building up goodwill among its customers. He declared that every employee on the pay roll is told of the value of goodwill in their dealings with customers and the public, and intimated that a similar practice could well be followed by businessmen generally.

The program was presented by the media committee, of which John K. Otley Jr. is chairman.

WUTHERING HEIGHTS

By EMILY BRONTE

INSTALLMENT XV.

She ran and returned and ran again many times before my sober footsteps reached the gate, and then she seated herself on the grassy bank beside the path and tried to wait patiently; but that was impossible: she couldn't be still a minute.

"How many they are!" she exclaimed.

At length her suspense was ended: the traveling carriage rolled in sight. Miss Cathy shrieked and stretched out her arms, as soon as she caught her father's face looking from the window. I took a peep in to see after Linton. He was asleep in a corner, a pale, delicate boy who might have been taken for my master's younger brother: strong was the resemblance. Cathy would have taken one glance, but her father told her to come, and they walked together up the park, while I hastened before to prepare the servants.

All three entered, and mounted to the library, where tea was laid ready. I proceeded to remove Linton's cap and mantle, and placed him on a chair by the table; but he was no sooner seated than he began to cry. Cathy carried a footstool and her cup to his side. At first she sat silent; but that could not last: she had resolved to make a pet of her little cousin.

"Oh, he'll do very well," said the master to me, after watching them a minute.

"Ay, if we can keep him!" I mused to myself.

I had already taken the children upstairs, after tea was finished, and seen Linton asleep, when a maid stepped out of the kitchen and informed me that Mr. Heathcliff's servant Joseph was at the door, and wished to speak with the master.

"I shall ask him what he wants first," I said. Joseph had advanced through the kitchen as I uttered these words, and now presented himself in the hall.

"It's Master Linton I must speak to," he said, waving me disdainfully aside.

"Mr. Linton is going to bed."

"Which is his room?"

I went up to the library and announced the unreasonable visitor, and Joseph planted himself at the far side of the table, with his two fists clapped on the head of his stick.

"Heathcliff has sent me for his lad, and I mustn't go back without him."

Edgar Linton was silent a minute; an expression of exceeding sorrow overcast his features.

"Tell Mr. Heathcliff," he answered calmly, "that his son shall come to Wuthering Heights tomorrow. He is in bed and too tired to go the distance now. You may also tell him that the mother of Linton desired him to remain under my guardianship; and, at present, his health is very precarious."

"Now!" said Joseph, giving a thud with his prop on the floor and assuming an authoritative air. "Now! that means nothing. Heathcliff makes no count of the mother, nor you neither; but he'll have his lad; and I mean to take him—so now yer know!"

"You shall not tonight!" answered Linton decisively.

"Very well!" shouted Joseph as he slowly drew off. "Tomorrow he'll come himself, and thrust him out, if yer dare!"

Mr. Linton commissioned me to take the boy home early, on Catherine's pony; and, said he: "As we shall now have no influence over his destiny, good or bad, you must say nothing to my daughter of where he is gone. Merely tell her his father sent for him suddenly, and he has been obliged to leave us."

The poor thing was finally got off at five in the morning, with several delusive assurances that his absence should be short. The pure heather-scented air, the bright sunshine, relieved his despondency after a while.

"Is Wuthering Heights as pleasant a place as Thrushcross Grange?" he inquired, turning and re-taking a last glance into the valley.

"It is not so buried in trees," I replied, "and it is not quite so large, but you can see the country beautifully all round; and the air is healthier for you—fresher and drier."

"And what is my father like?" he asked. "Is he as young and handsome as uncle?"

"He is as young."

"How strange that he should never come to see mamma and me!" he murmured.

The boy was fully occupied with his own cogitations till we halted before the farmhouse garden gate. It was half-past six; the family had just finished breakfast. Joseph stood by his master's chair telling some tale concerning a lame horse; and Harston was preparing for the hay field.

"Hallo, Nelly!" said Mr. Heathcliff. He got up and strode to the door. Harston and Joseph followed in gaping curiosity. Poor Linton ran a frightened eye over the faces of the three. Heathcliff, having stared his son into an agony of confusion, uttered a scornful laugh.

"God! what a beauty! what a lovely, charming thing!" he exclaimed. He took off the boy's cap and pushed back his thick flaxen curls, felt his slender arms and his small fingers. "Do you know me?" asked Heathcliff.

"No," said Linton with a gaze of vacant fear.

"You've heard of me, I dare say."

"No," he replied again.

"No! You are my son, then, and I'll tell you. Your mother was a wicked slut to leave you in ignorance of the sort of father you possessed."

"Well," I said, "I hope you'll be kind to the boy."

"I'll be very kind to him, you needn't fear," he said laughing. "I've ordered Harston to obey him. I do regret, however, that he so little deserves the trouble. He's bitterly disappointed with the whey-faced whining wretch!"

While he was speaking Joseph returned bearing a basin of milk-porridge and placed it before Linton, who stirred round the homely mess with a look of aversion.

"I can't eat this," said Linton. "Take it away."

"Get him something he can eat," said the master angrily. "What is his usual food, Nelly?"

I suggested boiled milk or tea; and the housekeeper received instructions to prepare some. Having no excuse for lingering longer I slipped out, while Linton was engaged in timidly rebuffing the advances of a friendly sheep-dog. But he was too much on the alert to be cheated; and when I closed the door, I heard a cry, and a frantic repetition of the words: "Don't leave me! I'll not stay here! I'll not stay here!"

We had sad work with little Cathy that day. Edgar himself was obliged to soothe her by affirming he should come back soon: he added, however, "If I can get him!" and there were no hopes of that.

When I chanced to encounter the housekeeper of Wuthering Heights, I asked how the young master got on; for he lived almost as secluded as Catherine herself, and was never to be seen. I could gather from her that he continued in weak health, and was a tiresome inmate.

Time wore on at the Grange in its former pleasant way till Miss Cathy reached sixteen. That 20th of March was a beautiful spring day, and when her father had retired, my young lady came down dressed for going out.

"Make haste, Ellen!" she cried. "I know where a colony of moor game are settled: I want to see whether they have made their nests yet."

I put on my bonnet and sallied out, thinking nothing more of the matter. She bounded before me and returned to my side and was off again like a young greyhound, her eyes radiant with cloudless pleasure.

But there were so many hillocks and banks to climb and pass that, at length, I began to be weary and told her she must halt, and retrace our steps, but she sprang on.

and I was compelled to follow. Finally I beheld a couple of persons arrest her, one of whom I felt convinced was Mr. Heathcliff. Cathy had been caught in the act of plundering or, at least, hunting out the nests of the grouse. The Heights were Heathcliff's land, and he was reproving the poacher.

"I've neither taken any nor found any," she said as I toiled to them.

"And what are you?" inquired Catherine, gazing curiously on the speaker. "That man I've seen before. Is he your son?"

She pointed to Harston, the other individual, who had gained nothing but increased bulk and strength by the addition of two years to his age; he seemed as awkward and rough as ever.

"No, that man is not my son," answered Heathcliff. "I think both you and Nelly would be better for a little rest. Will you just turn this nab of heath and walk into my house?"

I whispered Catherine that she mustn't on my account, accede to the proposal: it was entirely out of the question, but Heathcliff interrupted:

"Come, Nelly, hold your tongue—it will be treat for her to look in on us. Harston, get forwards with the lass. You shall walk with me, Nelly. I want to see Linton."

He continued, "He's looking better these few days: it's no often he's fit to be seen. And we'll soon persuade her to keep the visit secret: where is the harm of it?"

"The harm of it is that her father would hate me if he found I suffered her to enter your house."

"My design is as honest as possible. I'll inform you of its whole scope," he said to me quietly. "That the two cousins may fall in love and get married. I'm acting generously to your master; but your young chit has no expectations, and should he second my wishes, she'll be provided for at once as joint successor with Linton."

"If Linton died," I answered, "and his life is quite uncertain, Catherine would be the heir."

"No," she would not," he said. "There is no caluse in the will to secure it so: his property would go to me; but, to prevent disputes, I desire their union, and am resolved to bring it about."

Heathcliff bade me be quiet; and preceding us up the path, hastened to open the door. Linton stood on the hearth. He had been out walking in the fields, for his cap was on, and he was calling to Joseph to bring him dry shoes. He had grown tall for his age, still wanting some months to complete his stature. "What, Linton!" cried Cathy, kindling into joyful surprise at the name. "Is that little Linton? He's taller than I am!"

The youth stepped forward and acknowledged himself.

"And you are my uncle, then?" she cried, reaching up to salute Heathcliff. "I thought I liked you, though you were cross at first. Why don't you visit at the Grange with Linton? To live all these such close neighbors and never see is odd: what have you done so for?"

"Mr. Linton has a prejudice against me," said Heathcliff. "We quarreled at one time in our lives, with unchristian ferocity; and, if you mention coming here to him, he'll put a veto on your visits altogether."

"Why did you quarrel?" asked Catherine, considerably crestfallen.

"He thought me too poor to wed his sister," answered Heathcliff, "and was grieved that I got her; his pride was hurt, and he'll never forgive it."

Linton kept his seat and shrank closer to the fire. Heathcliff rose and went into the kitchen and from thence to the yard, calling out for Harston. Harston responded, and presently the two re-entered.

"Here, you go with her round the farm," Heathcliff said. "And behave like a gentleman, mind! Don't use any bad words; and don't stare when the young lady is not looking at you, and be ready to hide your face when she is; and when you speak, say your words slowly and keep your hands out of your pockets. Be off, and entertain her as nicely as you can."

He watched the couple walking past the window. Catherine took a sly look at him, expressing small admiration. Meantime, our young companion began to evince symptoms of uneasiness, probably repenting that he was denied the treat of Catherine's society.

Continued Tomorrow.

Dewey Favorite To Gain Republican Nomination; Garner Leads Democrats.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—In the latest poll of 1940 presidential possibilities, Newsweek magazine in its issue coming out tomorrow will say that the consensus of 50 Washington newspaper correspondents is that the Republicans are 2-to-1 favorites to win the election next year.

Announcing the results of a special questionnaire sent out to a selected group of correspondents at the capital, the magazine found a preponderance of the political writers predicting the nomination of Thomas E. Dewey, racket-busting New York state attorney, by the Republicans, with Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, running a close second.

Garner Favorite.

On the Democratic side, Vice President John N. Garner was listed as the favorite, with Secretary of State Cordell Hull the runner-up.

Despite the fact that he has delivered no official utterance on the subject and that the conviction is growing he will not be a third-term candidate, President Roosevelt was predicted as the nominee by the third largest group of the writers.

The forecasts of the correspondents that Republicans are 2-to-1 favorites to capture the presidency in 1940 is to be taken with a grain of salt. An analysis of the list of those answering the questionnaire shows a preponderance of New Deal papers just about in keeping with the division of feeling recorded. That is to say, the Republican or anti-New Deal correspondents outnumbered the Democratic correspondents about two to one, suggesting as the most charitable commentary that the writers in their predictions may have followed the political predictions of their papers.

Other Likely Nominees.

Other likely nominees of the Democrats as seen by the correspondents are, in the order of preference given: William O. Douglas, newly named associate justice of the supreme court; Senator Bennett Clark, of Missouri; Postmaster General James A. Farley, Senator Alben Barkley, of Kentucky, the majority leader; Associate Justice Stanley Reed, of Kentucky, former solicitor general; former Governor Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana; Joseph P. Kennedy, ambassador to London; Senator Scott W. Lucas, of Illinois, and Senator Harry Byrd, of Virginia, the latter two having been given one vote each.

Farley Vice President?

It was interesting to note that Postmaster General Farley, the national party chairman, was way ahead of the field as the prospective vice presidential nominee of the Democrats. Next to him for second place on the ticket came Clark, McNutt, Barkley, Garner, Lucas, Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, Attorney General Frank Murphy, Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana; Solicitor General Robert Jackson, House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas; Senator James F. Byrnes, of South Carolina, and a few others.

The Republican vice presidential possibilities predicted were, in the order given, Dewey, Taft, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, of Massachusetts; Governor Bricker, Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon, the minority leader; Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, minority leader of the house; Senator Vandenberg, Governor James, and others.

Chief reasons given for the expected Republican victory were "inadequate recovery, dissension among Democrats, and the popular desire for normalcy. Among the contingent favoring the Republicans to win the only condition attached to the prediction was "unless a major war breaks out."

LEBRUN RE-ELECTED FRENCH PRESIDENT

Tumultuous Assembly Votes 506 to 404 for Second Term.

VERSAILLES, April 5.—(AP)—A tumultuous national assembly today elected President Albert Lebrun to a second seven-year term despite opposition of Leftists struggling against the semi-dictatorial Daladier government.

Premier Daladier's campaign to make the election a demonstration of national unity during the present European tension fell short of the mark when violent Socialist and Communist uproar greeted the result. Shouts of "Resign! Resign!" followed announcement of Lebrun's selection.

Jules Jeanneney, president of the senate and presiding officer of the national assembly—the senate and the chamber of deputies—had to close the meeting because of the uproar without giving the complete official list of the votes.

With no serious rivals, 67-year-old Lebrun received 506 of the 910 votes cast, the remainder being distributed among party favorites. Election of Lebrun, who had expressed a personal preference to retire, broke a half-century tradition of one-term presidents.

The election safely behind, Daladier faced no immediate obstacles, since the decree powers parliament has granted him remain effective until November 30. The premier had prevailed upon Lebrun to serve again to avoid a change in government at a critical period. Election of a new president would have involved automatic resignation of the cabinet.

grade manganese, tungsten, rubber and tin among them—and related how industry began building up its stocks.

War in Europe seemed only a matter of hours, he said, speaking of Munich. "It was clear to anyone familiar with the history of the world that the role of the neutral would depend principally on his ability to demand the respect of all belligerents."

"It became obvious that we have to strengthen our army and to build up our navy," Chromium importers, he said, bought enough to meet the needs for three years. Producers of ferro-manganese began building up their reserves. Domestic tungsten production was accelerated. Chemists began working on rubber substitutes. Other experiments produced a "nickel plated can which today gives every promise of replacing tin for all purposes and at no greater cost."

Johnson related that at the War Department's suggestion, power companies serving munitions centers had prepared for the installation of machinery to produce 900,000 kilowatts and there is every indication that we very soon will reach our million mark."

He suggested a 4-point program for industry in the interests of national defense: Support of the President's armament program; an open mind on national defensive needs; self-education in the production of necessary war munitions and assistance to the War Department procurement officers who visited industrial plants.

"Of the 10,000 plants allocated for munitions purposes in this country," he added, "more than 4,000 of them are located in the area that extends from Boston to Wilmington and west to Pittsburgh . . . this small territorial belt . . . is the lifeline of America."

"We believe in peace" he concluded, "but we are determined to protect our peace."

Not so reassuring as Johnson, Rear Admiral Clark H. Woodward, emphasized the fact that we are not now geared up for war production. "It would require months, he added, for industry to produce war materiel efficiently."

"Meanwhile," he said, "as the world knows our status, this lack of preparedness on our part would give great advantage to an aggressive predatory enemy."

U.S.-TURKEY TRADE PACT PUT IN EFFECT

F. D. R. Signs Proclamation; Sets May 1 Aside as 'Child Health Day.'

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., April 5. (AP)—President Roosevelt signed a proclamation late today putting into effect a trade agreement between the United States and Turkey.

He also signed eight minor bills, seven of them relating to the District of Columbia. The eighth extends the time for retirement of cotton pool participation trust certificates.

The trade pact with Turkey had been signed by representatives of the two countries at Ankara on April 1. Officials here said details would be given out in Washington.

In addition to the proclamation, the President sent a letter to the secretary of the treasury authorizing him to put the pact's provisions into effect.

The President's only other official act of the day was the signing of a proclamation setting aside May 1 as "Child Health Day."

Harry L. Hopkins, secretary of commerce, a guest at the President's cottage, declined further interviews on his decision to change his voting residence from New York to Iowa.

admiralty, that men of the navy had been ordered to man British fleet anti-aircraft guns.

Chamberlain admitted that he had asked British newspapers to suppress Lord Stanhope's statement "because it seemed likely to be treated as a sensational matter," mildly rebuked the admiralty lord and then proceeded to confirm what Stanhope had said.

"Time of Tension."

Naval gunners were instructed some time ago to remain in readiness to man their guns, he said, because the government considers this to be a "time of tension."

His announcement was taken as confirmation of reports that warships and planes have been constantly on the alert for the last 10 days, patrolling the North sea and English channel day and night for submarines as well as airplanes.

Britons living near airbases have been complaining that they could not sleep because of intense aerial activity.

There were varying opinions in parliament as to whether the Stanhope incident had been prearranged to give occasion for a warning, particularly to Germany, that Britain was prepared for any possible "blitzkrieg" or lightning war which Nazi strategists might have in mind.

The German press, describing Lord Stanhope's statement at Portsmouth as "like something out of a madhouse," asserted that the incident was intentionally staged and was merely atrocity propaganda.

Makes Most of Incident.

In any event, Chamberlain made the most of the incident when he stressed that it revealed the constant readiness of the British navy.

An opportunity was provided, however, for the opposition to attack the British government's interference with the press—Chamberlain insisted that it was justified—and raise demands for Lord Stanhope's removal from the cabinet.

Chamberlain rejected the demands with the assertion that he was satisfied with the admiralty lord's "general efficiency."

In the house of lords, Lord Stanhope personally defended his action and expressed regret that "the remarks of mine emphasize the readiness of the navy to meet all eventualities, even when as now Easter leave is being given, should have added to the work of the prime minister or caused concern to anyone else."

The agreement on the Polish-British mutual defense pact, aimed directly at Hitler, constituted an expansion of the Anglo-French pledge of military aid to Poland given last week in a move designed to prevent any German coup against the Poles.

Kennedy Informed.

The agreement was reached to-night at a meeting in Chamberlain's private chambers in the house of commons, attended by the prime minister, Polish Foreign Minister Josef Beck, Ambassador Raczyński, Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, Sir Alexander Cadogan, of the British foreign office, and William Strang, head of the foreign office's central European division.

This evening United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, keeping abreast of the hour-by-hour developments in Europe, conferred with Beck at the Claridges hotel and was understood to have been told the contents of the military alliance.

The British cabinet approved the alliance at a meeting earlier in the day.

Storm Center on Adriatic Has New Prince

Acme Photo. In the midst of a mounting international crisis threatening the throne of King Zog and Queen Geraldine, of Albania, they became the parents of a son yesterday morning. Italian troops are reported poised within 45 miles of the Albanian coast for an occupation of the tiny kingdom. Queen Geraldine is of American descent.

Italy, copying her larger partner to the north, is looking eastward. Rome reports last night indicated Italian troops would move from the heel of the Italian boot-shaped peninsula across the narrow Adriatic to occupy little Albania.

that they exceeded any concessions Albania was prepared to make, and that the military precautions were taken on this account.

Independent Since 1912.

Albania, a wild and undeveloped country of 10,629 square miles and a population of one million, has been independent since 1912.

Previous to that it had been for four and a half centuries under Turkish rule. It lies directly across the Adriatic sea from Italy.

Crowds tonight were tense over the political situation. They gave vent to their nationalistic feelings in patriotic songs as they marched through the streets to the royal villa, where they cheered King Zog and the new crown prince which his American-Hungarian consort had given the country.

The baby was born at 3:30 a.m. An artillery salute of 101 guns told the people that a crown prince had been born and the rugged townfolk of Tirana marched through the streets to the royal palace to cheer.

(Queen Geraldine and her sister, Mme. Andreas von Baghy, of Budapest, became mothers on the same day. A girl was born to the Von Baghy's.)

Parliament Meets.

Parliament met in special session for an official proclamation of the birth by the premier. Then the cabinet and a parliamentary delegation went to the palace to congratulate King Zog. He received them with his sisters grouped around him.

Zog then reviewed a parade of all of Tirana's troops.

At the villa of King Zog's sister, Princess Senje, residence of the rulers while their new palace outside Tirana is being completed, it was said that Queen Geraldine was in good health. She and King Zog were married last April.

Festivities to last several days were ordered throughout the kingdom.

American Ancestry.

The Queen, 23 years old, is the former Countess Geraldine Apopyi, daughter of the late Count Julius Nagy-Apopyi, of Hungary,

POLISH PACT BARS 'CZECH' BETRAYAL

Pertinax Says Warsaw Alone Is To Decide Danger to Interests.

By PERTINAX. (Copyright, 1939, by The Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PARIS, April 5.—(By Wire) Foreign Secretary Halifax, of Britain, and Poland's foreign minister, Joseph Beck, have signed today or are about to sign an Anglo-Polish bilateral pact of mutual assistance.

The form of a bilateral commitment, as distinct from a collective obligation, was conceded to Beck. For the rest, it does not appear that any clause was inserted that clashes with the British plan that Prime Minister Chamberlain explained to parliament last Monday. An interpretative protocol is to be added to the pact.

Mediation Excluded.

The Warsaw government is to decide alone when Poland's vital interests are endangered and call for immediate acts of execution, which excludes altogether anything like mediation on the Runciman pattern.

The British government told Beck and Poland to conclude similar pacts with Rumania and Soviet Russia. Obvious gaps in such a system will be a lack of military arrangements between Poland and Rumania, Poland and Russia and Rumania and Russia. It is believed on the British side that such gaps will be filled sooner or later under the pressure of international developments.

Fear of Reich.

An important point is that, through the co-operation of Britain and Russia, a sort of shelter should have been built, available to any other state in distress. It is felt that secondary states still under the impression of the Ethiopian, Czechoslovak and Spanish disasters cannot be expected to join the new system without any reservation or equivocation whatever, as they fear too bold an attitude would expose them to immediate reprisal by the German Reich. They want to reserve the possibility of making common cause with the western powers in wartime, but they are reluctant to associate too openly or fully with them in peacetime.

If due regard is being paid to these considerations and to Beck's well-known personal bias, what has been done in London cannot be said to be unsatisfactory.

of the Italian army as under secretary of war, but formerly was chief military adviser to the Albanian army. He was in Albania from 1927 to 1932 and was considered one of King Zog's closest Italian advisers.

(In Berlin it was announced yesterday that he would confer again tomorrow at Innsbruck.)

General Zef Seregia, the new Albanian minister to Italy, flew back to Rome after a hasty trip to Albania.

Usually reliable sources said he conferred immediately with Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano, presumably on proposed "strengthening of the Italian-Albanian alliance" which Italians say King Zog has requested.

Seregia was accompanied by Francesco Jacomoni, Italian minister to Tirana.

Albania, a rugged state of 10,629 square miles with 1,003,124 inhabitants, has been under strong Italian influence for years with Italy interested both in a foothold on the Adriatic's east coast and in Albania's oil resources.

Sharp Italian warnings to little countries against acceptance of British and French protection were sounded today.

These admonitions in the controlled press gave rise to a feeling Italy's reported intention to send troops across the Adriatic to Albania was meant to help break the ring of Italians believe London is trying to forge around Germany and Italy.

Most foreign observers regarded reports of a "strengthening" of the Italian-Albanian alliance as a tacit warning, particularly to Yugoslavia and Greece.

Italian silence on reported moves in the Adriatic tended to confuse observers who vainly sought confirmation of the rumors—that King Zog I, of Albania, already had asked for Italian troops to put down an uprising; that Italy was sending troops to the closely-allied neighbor, and that Zog had requested strengthening of the military pact.

Authoritative Fascists, however, indicated Italy was ready with Germany to break "encirclement"—that is, an anti-aggression front now being discussed in London by Polish Foreign Minister Joseph Beck and British officials.

"Those who play with fire run the risk of getting burned," one responsible Italian said, using the same idea that Chancellor Hitler expressed Saturday when the Fuehrer warned those who pulled chestnuts out of the fire for others might themselves be burned.

Newspapers were more explicit.

La Tribuna said: "The English scheme to form a coalition under French-British leadership of all European nations outside of, and against, the totalitarian states . . . constitutes the major menace to peace."

It would be a pure loss for the little nations whose entrance in the anti-German coalition, rather than putting off the danger from Germany, if it ever existed, would only provide and hasten it.

"The Reich would not wait 24 hours to break the encirclement." The press hardened its tone against Britain for the first time since the British-Italian accord last November made Rome and London nominal friends.

Marian Anderson Thrills 6,000 With Rich Voice in Concert Here

Enthusiastic Audience Gives Negro Contralto Great Ovation Following Each Number; Quality of Singer's Tones Are Rare and Majestic.

By MOZELLE HORTON YOUNG. Marian Anderson, negro contralto, gave an Atlanta audience of music lovers, some 6,000 in number, half white and half colored, one of the greatest thrills of their concert-going life last night when she sang at the city auditorium, presented by Marvin McDonald.

Personally, it was the first time I had heard Anderson, and I hasten to say that in all the concerts I have heard there have been only one or two singers who gave me as great a musical thrill as did she last night.

The unusual quality of her voice is indescribable. There is an intangible appeal and a deep richness that surely must be inherent and almost unbelievable in the scope of her range. From the deep chest tones, so full and majestic and gloriously rich, to the fluent and agile high register, with a middle register that was superbly and beautifully, all were delivered with perfect legato style and perfect vocal placement.

Audience Enthusiastic.

Anderson has scored success after success in the east and north and in Europe. Her complete composure, she is a great artist, and any great artist is humble before his art. Marian Anderson needs no showmanship to aid her art, and she has none whatever.

One of the most appreciative audiences I have ever seen heard her. White and colored were equally enthusiastic in their ovation, and I believe every person there could not help feeling privileged in sharing something very rare indeed.

It seemed that Anderson's singing of Schubert's "Ave Maria" was the loveliest thing I had ever heard. Starting on the softest tone she built the phrase into a thrilling crescendo, all on one breath. Her breath control was almost superhuman, and her perfect legato, together with the soul that was back of the tone, made it a memorable experience.

The aria, "Casta Diva," from Bellini's "Norma," was the second high point of the program. This great aria, which is a task for a soprano, showed unmistakably the versatility and dramatic power of Anderson's voice. She sang with greatest ease a high A-flat.

Sings Negro Spirituals.

Anderson opened her program with a classic group by Handel and a group of German lieder included, in addition to the "Ave Maria," "On the Mount," and "The Bird," both by Schubert, and "The Nut Tree," and "The Night Is Cold," both by Schumann, with "The Trout," by Schubert, as an encore. The entire group was sung with superb artistry and perfect German diction.

Her first English group offered Scott's "Lullaby," a gem of tender beauty. "Rivers," by Charles Cohen, dramatic and modern, winning an ovation; "Deserted Street," by Vahanian, weird but appealing; and "Summer," by Chaminade. The encore was Dvorak's "Songs My Mother Taught Me."

Anderson caught at the heart-strings of her auditors in even more forceful manner as her glorious tones rolled out on the old familiar negro spirituals in the last group. Among them were "Sinner, Please Doan' Let Dis 'Trampin' Pass," "Gospel Train," "Tramping," and "Der's No Hidin' Place Down Dere," and the encore, "All God's Chillin' Got-a Robe." She received such an ovation that she came back to sing a little comedy song, "The Cuckoo," that "brought the house down," and they kept clamoring for even until she returned and sang "Comin' Through the Rye."

Franz Rupp was the accompanist, and he provided the perfect pianistic background for her voice at all times. A better compliment could not be paid.

FIRST LADY SPONSOR FOR ANDERSON CONCERT

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has permitted use of her name as a sponsor of the Marian Anderson concert Sunday afternoon, persons arranging the negro singer's appearance said today.

Anderson will sing from the steps of the Lincoln Memorial. This site was arranged after she was refused use of Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Sponsors include some members of the supreme court and the cabinet, and senators and representatives. The Marian Anderson citizens' committee said Mrs. Roosevelt would try to return from Seattle, Wash., in time for the concert.

Sweet Ad-o-line Author No Better Than You or I

NEW YORK, April 5.—(AP)—Court attaches told Magistrate Richard E. McKiniry that Henry W. Armstrong, charged with illegal parking, had written the music for "Sweet Adeline" 38 years ago.

"Then sing it and I'll suspend sentence," the court ordered. The defendant smilingly complied. The magistrate listened intently, then suspended sentence as he had promised.

"But I ought to fine you for your singing," he remarked.

Headache, Bad Breath May Be Your Warning

To most everyone, the sea's thrilling S. O. S. means "Help is needed now!" That's the same message Nature often tries to convey by means of headaches, biliousness, dullness, coated tongue or bad breath, which are common signs of constipation. Disregard of these warnings may bring on a host of constipation's other discomforts: sour stomach, belching, loss of appetite or energy, mental dullness.

Don't neglect your very important bowels. When symptoms indicate a laxative is needed, take a little spicy, aromatic, all vegetable BLACK-DRAUGHT. It acts gently by simple directions; cleanses as thoroughly as the harsher ones.

BLACK-DRAUGHT's unusual help, it is believed, comes from its principal ingredient, which has high medicinal recognition as "an intestinal tonic-laxative." It helps make the bowels act better by imparting tone to their lazy muscles.

Its long life and the millions of packages used, bespeak your confidence in BLACK-DRAUGHT. Try it next time a laxative is needed. Economical, too. 25 to 40 doses 25c.—(adv.)

Little Commencement Dances To Attract Atlantans to Athens

By Sally Forth.

ATHENS will be the Mecca for Georgia's college contingent this week end when the Panhellenic Council of the University of Georgia stages its annual little commencement dances in Woodruff Hall. The occasion will mark the outstanding social week end of the entire year at the college, and will assemble hundreds of university graduates who will visit their alma mater for the first time in several years.

Social festivities galore have been planned by sororities and fraternities on the campus to enliven little commencement. Outstanding among these will be the parties to be given on Friday and Saturday evenings by members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity.

Charley Evans Jr., of Warrenton, president of the Panhellenic Council, will head the Panhellenic lead-morning, and a tea-dance from 5 to 7 o'clock on Saturday afternoon.

This year Larry Clinton, well-known dance band leader and composer, and his orchestra, will provide swing music for the enjoyment of students and visitors.

Among popular Atlanta belles and beaux motoring to the nearby college town will be Ann Wilson Still, of Monroe, campus leader, will head the grand march at the brilliant Saturday night dance. Other affairs will include a breakfast-dance on Saturday

Mrs. Franklin Weds Paul Timmons Webb

The marriage of Mrs. Mozelle E. Franklin, of this city, to Paul T. Webb, of Greenville, S. C., was quietly solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church by Dr. L. D. Newton in the presence of relatives and close friends.

The bride was attired in a light blue sheer wool suit trimmed with a blue fox fur collar. She wore navy blue accessories and a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

Mr. and Mrs. Webb left after the ceremony by motor for Miami, Fla., where they will spend their honeymoon. They will return to Greenville, S. C., for residence.

Mrs. Webb is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Adams, of Mansfield, Ga., but for the past 10 years she has resided in this city.

Appenheimer, Betty Yopp, McKee Nunnally and Bobby Crumley, who will form a congenial foursome attending the dances.

Ethel Erwin, who is now in Camilla visiting Lucy Davis, will journey to Athens tomorrow to be among visiting belles at little commencement.

Martha Ewing will also spend the week end at the state university, and will be a sought-after figure at the dances.

Catherine Young and Betty Carver will be among popular members of the high school contingent attending the gala affairs. They will leave for Athens as soon as their Seminary textbooks are stored away for the week end.

WHEN the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs convened recently in LaGrange, the presence of Miss Marion Woodward, one of its most valued members, was greatly missed.

Miss Woodward is a diligent worker in the federation, and her absence marked the first time in many years that she has failed to attend one of its conventions. As you know, she is enjoying a cruise of several months in Africa, and at this time is sojourning in the big-game section of the country.

The popular traveler inherits the keen interest of her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. David Woodward, in the Student Aid Foundation, of which she was chairman for the past two years, in the federation. In her absence her report was brilliantly delivered by her successor, Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens.

In addition to her many other interests here, Miss Woodward is prominently identified with Talulah Falls school, and upon her return to this city will continue her work in behalf of the worthy north Georgia mountain students.

THE high light of the week for students at the Georgia State College for Women in Milledgeville, is the hobby show being sponsored by the library at the school.

Both the faculty and the student body are contributing entries, which range "from the sublime to the ridiculous."

Match folders, perfume bottles, candid snapshots, old newspapers, needlepoint work, bottle tops, autographs, locks of human hair, and many other weird objects are included in the display, and a prize will be awarded the owner of the most original contribution.

Miss Anne Pfeiffer, assistant librarian, and her student committee are directing the show.

MR. and MRS. A. B. PADGETT deserve top honors for their originality in announcing the birth of their new son, A. B. Andrews Padgett Jr.

Friends of the couple received in yesterday's mail delivery an oblong cardboard ticket resembling a theater pass, and bearing the following announcement:

"Wita and A. B. Padgett present 'It's a Boy,' starring A. B. Andrews Padgett Jr., April 2, 1933, 5:10 P. M. Directed by Dr. John Duncan."

Printed beneath the above in small type is the following: "The management reserves the right to cancel personal appearance if the star is sleeping."

Across one end of the ticket is written: "Weight 6 pounds and 8 ounces—2 blue eyes. Number 1 side seat Piedmont Hospital, Atlanta, Ga."

Lethermon—Landers Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Lethermon announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Frances Hazel Lethermon, to Harold P. Landers, of Monroe. The marriage was solemnized on April 1 at the home of Rev. E. E. Steele. Mrs. Landers returned recently with her parents from Manila, P. I.

Miss Ruth Moore, of Decatur, whose marriage to John R. Smith will take place on Easter Sunday. Miss Moore is the attractive young daughter of Mrs. E. R. Moore.

PERSONALS

Miss Elkin Goddard has returned from Charlotte, N. C., where she visited her brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Pickens.

Miss Elizabeth Thompson, of Sea Island Beach, arrives tomorrow to spend the week end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Thompson, at the Colonial Terrace hotel.

Mrs. McKibben Lane, of Macon, arrived yesterday to spend several days with Mrs. Spann Milner at her home on West Peachtree street.

Miss Frances Bourke will arrive Saturday from the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, Mich., where she is a student, to spend the Easter vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Bourke, in the Ponce de Leon apartments.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. DuPre Jr., of Marietta, announce the birth of a son, April 4, at Piedmont hospital, whom they have named Harry N. III. Mrs. DuPre is the former Miss Ruth Hunnicut, daughter of L. L. Hunnicut, of Atlanta. The baby's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harry N. DuPre, of Marietta.

Ottley McCarty, a student at Darlington School in Rome, is spending the Easter holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McCarty, on Peachtree road.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Reese Jr., have taken possession of their apartment on Lafayette drive. Mrs. Reese was before her marriage February 1, Miss Elinor Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. C. Smith.

Mrs. Louise M. Youngs returned yesterday from a visit with her daughter, Miss Lil Youngs, who is a student at Arlington Hall in Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roe Burks, of Thomaston, announce the birth of a son, James Roe Jr., on March 28 at Georgia Baptist hospital. Mrs. Burks is the former Miss Thelma Heard, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Andrews Padgett announce the birth of a son, A. B. Andrews Jr., on April 2 at Piedmont hospital. Mrs. Padgett is the former Miss Wita Moreland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bion Moreland, of Woodbury.

The baby's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Ben R. Padgett.

Miss Julia Eby arrived yesterday from Mt. DeSales Academy in Macon to spend the spring holidays with her mother, Mrs. Julia Rosser Eby, at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

William Shelton, who attends Holy Cross Institute at Worcester, Mass., is spending the spring holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Shelton, on Cherokee road.

Grantland Rice has returned to his home following a tonsil operation at the Ponce de Leon infirmary.

Misses Olive Bell Davis and Anne Garrett will arrive Friday from Arlington Hall in Washington, D. C.

Miss Kilpatrick Weds Edward Lyon At St. Luke's Church

Mr. and Mrs. Earle Edward Lyon whose marriage took place yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at St. Luke's Episcopal church left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Florida.

Mrs. Lyon is the former Miss Helen Kilpatrick, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Kilpatrick, of Macon, and Mr. Lyon is the son of Mrs. E. E. Lyon, of this city.

Rev. John Moore Walker read the service in the presence of the bride and groom's families. Deep yellow and bronze colored irises were artistically arranged in the altar vases with floor baskets of graceful sprays of bridal wreath adding a white note to the attractive decorations.

The bride, who was unattended, wore a smart tailored ensemble of maize colored wool with which she wore a lime green chiffon blouse and brown accessories. Her hat was of lime green fabric trimmed with a matching veil. She wore a scarf of pink fur and a shoulder bouquet of valley lilies.

En route to Florida the bridal pair stopped at Macon where they were entertained at an informal breakfast by the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kilpatrick, at their home on Arlington place.

Upon their return here Mr. and Mrs. Lyon will reside at 648 Cresthill avenue.

Clubs Will Hold Social on Friday.

The Glennwood Estates Civic and Garden Clubs of Decatur will hold a social on Friday evening, April 14, at the Decatur Woman's Club, for the purpose of becoming acquainted.

Members of the entertainment committee will serve as hosts and assist in general introductions of the members. Activities will include bingo and a Dr. Quiz contest, dancing and refreshments.

The men's entertainment committee is composed of A. J. Kroog, chairman; J. M. Burnell, C. M. Burwell, G. M. Spurlin and B. W. Bradford. The women's entertainment committee includes Mrs. L. Bushfield, chairman; Mrs. A. J. Kroog, Mrs. L. G. Gray, Mrs. E. L. Jackson and Mrs. J. H. Henderson. Prizes will be awarded to winners of the contests.

Mr. and Mrs. James Roy Skiles, of Evanston, Ill., and their nephew, Dr. William Snisher, of Chicago, will arrive today to spend the week end with Dr. and Mrs. William Vernon Skiles, at their home in Druid Hills.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Upshaw, of 311 Lawton street, announce the birth of a son, Ronald Edward, at St. Joseph's infirmary on March 24.

Miss Alma Wilby Fetes Visitor With Elaborate Dinner-Dance

Miss Alma Wilby entertained last evening at an elaborate dinner-dance at Brookhaven Country Club honoring her visitor and classmate, Miss Patricia Jenkins, of Seattle, Wash.

Miss Jenkins and Miss Wilby, who are students at Finch school in New York, are spending the Easter vacation with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert B. Wilby, on Tuxedo road.

The guests were received in the living room by Mr. and Mrs. Wilby, Miss Wilby and Miss Jenkins, who stood before a bank of palms and spring flowers.

Throughout the living room quantities of varicolored flowers were artistically arranged.

Miss Wilby was gowned in a white satin dress featuring a tight bodice and a full flowing skirt. A shoulder bouquet of orchids completed her costume. Miss Jenkins was attired in a blue, green and orange striped Kentucky linen model with which she wore a shoulder bouquet of deep purple orchids.

A horseshoe-shaped table outlined three walls of the ballroom and was gracefully centered at intervals with large mounds of Better Time roses and white snapdragons.

During the evening an orchestra rendered a program of popular dance music.

Eighty-five members of the young social contingent were invited to meet the visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilby, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Jenkins and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kessnich assisted the hostess in entertaining.

Miss Jenkins was honor guest yesterday at a luncheon at which Mrs. Charles Kessnich was hostess in the grill of the Capital City Club.

Covers were laid for Misses Jenkins, Alma Wilby, Sarah Jenkins, Beverly Bailey, Rachel Burton, Bungy Fuller, Alberta Bell, Alice Davis, Nancy Keeler, Marion Walker, Mrs. R. B. Wilby and Mrs. William K. Jenkins.

The Harm Done by Overeating Is Mainly Nutritional Deficiency

My Day: Root of Good Manners Is Kindness of Feeling

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

SEATTLE, Wash.—This routine of grandchildren at home, the hospital, mother and baby, does not provide any very new or interesting subjects to write about. Particularly when everything goes as well as it is going in this particular family at present.

However, it is amusing as a grandmother, to find oneself going back to the problems of young and growing children again. I wonder if there ever was a family where some child didn't dawdle over his food until all the grownups decided that it would really be good for him or her to starve. Also, the question of the need for manners comes up today, just as it used to do. Someone remarked to me that, when they were young, they were taught never to be rude to an older person and, therefore, they found it difficult to understand the manners of today.

I can remember my own very self-conscious curtsies to older visitors, and my irritation at having to sit politely and listen to conversations which meant nothing to me, and that my grandmother felt that my generation had lost all the niceties of good manners. The root of good manners is really kindness of feeling. I often think we don't explain to children when they are young enough, that they receive what they give in this world. The rudeness to anyone, or lack of thought for other people's feelings, is apt to bring an unhappy and antagonistic atmosphere into any relationship.

If our lives can be said to be calm and uneventful, the mail, at least, continues as varied as usual. I have everything before me from the plaint of a young woman with six children, whose husband can't find work and yet can't get on WPA, to a diatribe from a gentleman in California who tells me that WPA is unpopular with the great mass of people who earn low incomes, often below WPA wages, simply because those on WPA are being paid too much. Here is a nice question. Should you attempt to raise the general economic level so that there may be no group that must live on a substandard basis, or should you, as represented by the government-operated WPA, drag an ever-increasing number of people down to a lower standard of living by paying them so little that their buying power is negligible? In doing this, you would, of course, be adding to the downward spiral of business, as well as setting a lower standard of living.

To jump to an entirely different subject, I have a plea from a man who is deeply interested in Manhattan Island, particularly in the beauty of the approach from the ocean at Battery Park. He tells me that a New York official who is, without doubt, always efficient, is proposing a bridge 100 feet high at the river, which will go across to the Whitehall building over Battery Park. This, he says, will mean a screen of elevated roadways, pillars, etc., at that particular point. I haven't a question that this will be done in the name of progress, and something undoubtedly needs to be done. But isn't there room for some consideration of the preservation of the few beautiful spots that still remain to us on an overcrowded island? After all, lower Manhattan at Battery Park is one of the gateways through which many of us leave and enter our country. These moments are important moments in our lives and the irritation of an eyesore perpetrated in the name of progress will be bad for the souls of many Americans.

Colorful House Decorations May Be Practical As Well

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

The Hubbards have perfected the fine art of friendly argument. They each have their say, but they manage to maintain an affectionate good humor through their disagreements. Louise usually has her way in the house because, said Henry, "The details mean so darn much more to her than they do to me." And Henry usually has his way in the yard because, said Louise, "After all, he does the work there."

Recently they've fixed over the living room, and Louise had to do plenty of "talking Henry into" her idea. She had her heart set on a peach ground. This chintz set used to slip cover two easy chairs, while the sofa got a copper-colored covering with a prim pair of cushions of the floral chintz. Two odd side chairs got seats of aquamarine; accessories were in copper and crystal, and altogether all the set was fresh and smart and pleasant to live in. In fact, Henry beams on the room as fondly as if it had been his own idea.

"But Henry," explained Louise,

For Brother and Sister—Barbara Bell

You'll certainly take even more pride in the looks of your young hopefuls, when they start off to school in matching outfits, made with this new smart design (1713-B). It's smart as well as sensible to dress little brother and sister alike—at least almost alike. The shirts, you see, are identical. But sister's suspender skirt (which flares saucily) has a front decoration that brother prefers not to bother with. His shorts, of course, are as plain and straight as masculine pride demands.

Both little outfits are quick and easy to make; the pattern includes a step-by-step chart. Choose flannel, jersey, linen or pique for the skirt and shorts. Linen, broadcloth or pique for the shirts.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1713-B is designed for sizes 2, 4 and 6 years. Size 4 requires 1 1/4 yards each of 36-inch material for the shirts; 1 1/4 yards for the shorts; 1 3/8 yards for the skirt.

Send for Barbara Bell's Spring Pattern Book! Make your own smart new frocks for street, daytime and afternoon, with these simple, carefully planned designs! It's chic, it's easy, it's economical. To sew your own. Each pattern includes a step-by-step sew chart to guide beginners.

Arteriosclerosis May Be Induced By Overeating

By Dr. William Brady.

When Dr. Osler was so impressed by the part played by overeating in inducing arteriosclerosis that he believed excess in eating did more damage than excess in drinking, a fancy expressed in the saying that "the platter kills more than the sword," the science of nutrition was in the embryonic state. Besides the sword wasn't killing many even in Osler's day.

Allowing two pounds of sugar per week for every man, woman and child in the country (the present per capita consumption of sugar is greater than that), Sherman (Food Products, Macmillan) estimates that the energy obtained from eating sugar must amount to 500 calories per person per day, which is from one-fourth to one-fifth of the total daily energy requirement of the average person (men, women, infants).

If you are disposed to question the applicability of these facts to your nutrition, on the ground that offhand you can't believe you consume anywhere nearly as much sugar as that, what, may I ask, do you live on, anyway? Certainly you have to get from 2500 to 4000 calories a day from one kind of food or another! Specifically you may get as much as one-third of the daily energy requirements from proteins (lean meat, egg white, cheese, nitrogenous material in vegetables and nuts) and from fats, but you normally get from two-thirds to four-fifths of the daily energy requirement from carbohydrates material—starches and sugars—the proportion increasing with increased physical activity, work, play, exercise. The human body mechanism is adapted to function most efficiently on fuel having about that formula—protein one part, fat one part, carbohydrate from six to twelve parts depending on the work to be done.

Other than sugar, probably most people use breadstuffs, cake, pastry more than vegetables as the main source of carbohydrate material in the daily diet. If bread today were the "staff of life" this practice would be healthful enough. But bread was described as the "staff of life" long before modern refining of flour had come into use. There is a vital difference between plain wheat, whole wheat, entire wheat, with nothing removed during milling or grinding, and modern ultra-refined white flour. There isn't space to define the difference here and still finish what we have to say today—if you wish to know more about it send stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for (do not send clipping) monograph "Wheat to Eat."

The harm done by overeating is not mere strain from overloading the system and overworking organs, arteries and so on. The harm lies rather in the fact that the diet is poorly balanced. The specific fault with the diet is insufficient intake of the minerals and vitamins that grow in food but are largely removed in the process of refinement, cooking, preservation, purification, sterilization, bleaching.

In short, paradoxical though it may seem to the uninitiated, the harm done by overeating is mainly nutritional deficiency.

"If we're just going to have things around that are practical, we'll end up with an assortment of mud color and that won't show dirt, that's true—they'll just look like dirt at the time. After all, I'm the one who's going to have to keep things up, so you should worry."

Of course, she won—and Henry was as proud of the result as she was. She bought a pale grey rug and had the walls painted in the same pale grey. Then accented the ensemble with white plaster wall brackets to hold white bowls of ivy, white alabaster lamps with white stretched silk shades, white net curtains with chintz draperies, fuel-having flowers softly on the peach ground. This chintz set used to slip cover two easy chairs, while the sofa got a copper-colored covering with a prim pair of cushions of the floral chintz. Two odd side chairs got seats of aquamarine; accessories were in copper and crystal, and altogether all the set was fresh and smart and pleasant to live in. In fact, Henry beams on the room as fondly as if it had been his own idea.

Woman's Quiz

Q. My legs from the knee to the thigh are very heavy in proportion to the rest of my body and I would like to reduce them. What exercises can you suggest?

A. Grasp a railing, bottom of bed or edge of a substantial piece of furniture and stand on tip toe with your feet as far back as you can get them; raise one foot by kicking back and up as far as possible and note how the thigh muscles of both legs move up and down. Gradually work up to doing this ten times with each leg. Stand erect and extend one foot as far forward as possible with toes pointed and kick up as far as possible. Alternate and gradually work up to doing the exercise ten times with each leg. Do not neglect the common squatting exercise which is always excellent for the legs.

Q. Give directions for cooking spring greens.

A. Wash them three or four times, put them in an open kettle, using only the water that clings to them after they have been washed, and cook until they reach the wilted stage. Pieces of pork or meat drippings, cooked with the greens, add flavor. When serving, add a little horseradish, bits of crisp bacon, cheese sauce or slices of hard-cooked egg.

Mother Poisons Daughter's Mind

By Caroline Chatfield

Dear Miss Chatfield: My friends tell me I'm a fool because I'm determined to be an old maid and refuse to believe the lying lines the boys hand me; but my friends don't know men as I do or they wouldn't be such suckers. Ten years ago my father left my mother flat, broke her heart and she's never been the same since. She says you can't trust any man and I believe her after what I've seen. I figure that I can get along pretty well without a husband and at least avoid a broken heart by making my own way in the world and making up to mother what she lost. Do you agree with my friends or with me?

HELOISE.

Answer: My dear girl, I think you are riding for a fall; for you will discover that it's impossible to be happy or to lead a normal life without faith in your fellow men. Not maintaining the raw deal your mother got, it was not as raw as the deal she's giving you. She's permitting her disappointment to embitter her and because misery loves company she's trying to embitter you. She's selfishly putting up her sorrow between you and any future happiness, destroying your faith in men because her marriage failed. It's wicked.

Don't you imagine that your mother would rather have had her romance and marriage, and you, the reminder of happier days, even if her marriage had ended disastrously, than to be now at middle age with an empty heart, an empty life and no memories? Surely if she had it to do over again she would love, believe, marry and take the chance. Yet she would deny you this choice by poisoning your mind against men.

All of life is built on faith, religion, business, friendship, romance, marriage, parenthood and if all of us were to let go our faith because we'd had disappointment wouldn't this world be a foul place to live in? Haven't we all lent money and lost it without concluding that everybody in the world was dishonest? Haven't we seen lovely romances wrecked without deciding that there was no such thing as love?

Now don't cut yourself out of the joy of loving and believing (they are inseparable) even though you don't get married; for it's better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. And the chances are that if you use your wits in choosing your husband and doing a good part by him after you get him, you'll live happily ever after to bless the day your faith in men was restored.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Exercise Care In Second Lead

By Harold Sharpsteen.

When defending leader wins the first trick, the choice of the proper second lead to make depends on cards showing in the dummy and the card played by partner to the opening lead. Frequently the winning defensive strategy is to make the second lead through broken strength in the dummy hand, lacking better means of attack.

West opens the Heart King against North-South's club contract. The King holding the first trick. Faced with the problem of a second lead, West examines dummy hand. It contains no short suit—singleton or void. East has played the Heart deuce, discouraging a continuance of that suit.

West's next best choice is to lead through dummy's broken strength, the Spade King-Jack-five. In leading through strength, defender should select a suit in dummy hand as:

A Q 5 --- K J 6 --- A 7 3

It is not sound strategy to lead through solid strength in dummy, as:

A K Q --- A K J 10 --- K Q J A Q J 10 9

With East on the lead, the return, when in doubt, should be made up to dummy's weakness. Leader's second lead should not be a trump regardless of a short suit in dummy if leader holds a sure trump trick which might be sacrificed by a trump lead, as a guarded trump King. If leader leads low from the guarded King, the King will, in all probability, be lost.

Till tomorrow... Mail your bridge problems to Harold Sharpsteen, care of this paper.

Dorothy Lamour Swims For Her Streamlining

By Ida Jean Kain.

Dorothy Lamour, whose figure is so beautiful that she is almost considered wasted in any picture in which her wardrobe is not restricted to a sarong, does not like calisthenics and doesn't hesitate to say so. She prefers to swim, once a day, like most people take baths. And she really swims!

Miss Lamour unwittingly laid the foundation for her perfect proportions when she was a schoolgirl. She swam off with the honors in a number of high school contests and, for extracurricular exercises, she collected medals at Girl Scout meets. Finally, the Scouts promoted her to the post of life saver to keep her busy while someone else got a chance at the medals.

And what strokes does the cinema Venus like? Why, the Australian crawl, which is splendid for the arms, shoulders, midriff and lower limbs; and the old-fashioned stroke, which is good for all these measurements and for the bust contour, too. As an extra reward for all her swimming, Miss Lamour's figure measures: Bust, 35 1/2 inches; waist, 25 inches; hips, 38 inches.

She is five feet five and one-half inches tall and weighs only 116 pounds, but that nice musculature takes care of any possible aging as well as assuring beautiful weight distribution. She looks like conclusive proof of her own conviction that women can get more fun and streamlines out of a sport—preferably swimming—than in any routine exercises.

Miss Lamour, whose regal walk contributes considerably to her attractiveness in those native girl costumes, is extremely posture conscious. She thinks it is the general feminine tendency to walk with the tummy slightly out in front and the hips out in back, and the remedy for that, she declares, is fencing. As soon as she gets back to Hollywood, she intends to take up fencing.

Such genuine enthusiasm for sports should prove to anyone that Miss Lamour is no delicate hot-house plant. But in case you are under the impression that these movie beauties are never exposed to any real hardships, here is what went on in New York: On arriving she had the flu and was running a temperature, but her apartment was the stamping ground for photographers and reporters who clicked away merrily and popped one question after another while Miss Lamour, supposed to be taking it easy after just completing a picture, continued to smile sweetly and gave answers that made sense. Any other girl would have been in bed with the curtains drawn and a nurse tiptoeing in attendance.

Usually she is radiantly healthy, thanks to sensible living: Eight hours' sleep every night and sometimes nine or 10; plenty of sun and swimming and occasionally a long hike.

That is simple enough, isn't it? And yet, how few women follow such a program! If they did, there would be many, many more of these perfect figures!

Lily Pools Give Additional Beauty to a Rock Garden

A lovely triple-pool nestling at the foot of a rock garden slope—what a charming "landscaped" look it gives your lawn!

But all you need to make such a pool is three little waterproof containers—tubs, half barrels or the ready-made metal pools. Sink them in the ground in a triangle pattern, or in any arrangement you like.

Half fill each tub with soil and add a half inch of sand. Then fill each tub to the brim with water.

Now you're ready to start your water lilies. Best to choose for small pools the charming pigmy variety—which has blooms of deep red, sunny yellow or waxy white. Allow one plant to a tub, start them easily by pressing a section of rootstock or tuber into the mud till covered. Complete the picture with water hyacinths, which float lazily on the surface, and other graceful aquatic plants.

A beautiful setting for your pool? Weathered rocks make a delightful, natural-looking border. Plants? Choose the moisture-loving kind, an umbrella palm for the tiny triangle between pools; gay clusters of marsh marigold, fountain grass and marsh iris for the rocky borders.

For your rock garden back-ground plant glossy rhododendron. Tuck saucy columbine, sturdy hen-and-chickens in crevices among the rocks.

How to make a rock garden? How to build a slope for it if you haven't a natural one? Our 40-page booklet, GARDENING MADE EASY, has complete instructions for rock gardens, lily pools and directions for growing lilies, hardy and tropical lilies. Tells how to budget and plan a complete garden—with lawn, trees, vines, shrubbery, flowers, gourds, herb borders. Gives pointers on vegetable gardens, window boxes, how to get rid of pests.

Send 15c in coins for our booklet, GARDENING MADE EASY, to Home Institute Department, The Atlanta Constitution. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Easy-to-Make Shirtfrock—Lillian Mae

Into the world of spring fashion comes this "look slimmer" design... the newest, easiest-to-make and most gracious of button-front dresses! Scalloping on collar, sleeves and pockets snaps up its smartness to a new peak of charm... and rounding off these pretty petal-like curves is simple as A, B, C (as you'll find out from the Sewing Instructor of Pattern 4089). IF YOU FEEL SUNK Read this and cheer up

Are you so blue that life is no longer worth living? Do you cry easily? Do you feel low, weary, depressed—just absolutely SUNK? Then here's good news for you in case you need a general system tonic—Just take famous Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Let its wholesome herbs and roots help Nature build up more physical resistance and tone up your system, so that it can more easily throw off the "blues" and give you reason to enjoy life.

MILLIONS of women have depended upon this Compound and have passed the word along to friends and neighbors, and to their children.

Why not take Pinkham's Compound and go "feeling fine"?

Crackers Regain Punch To Win, 9-4; Cardinals Here Today

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

Reports of an impending shake-up in the Cracker ranks comes strictly under the heading of news to Manager Paul Richards who, after all, should know.

"I have been a little concerned about a lack of punch in the pinch, but it is too early to get alarmed about a thing like that. If it should develop after the season starts that we need a hard-hitting outfielder, why, we'll make an effort to get one. As far as I am concerned the present infield is all right. In fact, all around I think it is a pretty good ball club," Richards said yesterday before the final game with St. Paul started.

Richards is not insisting that the Crackers play at break-neck speed in the exhibition games. He doesn't want the club to be worn out before the season starts. Which seems fair—and logical—enough.

The Crackers of 1938 didn't set any record for victories in exhibition games. In fact, they lost five games to Savannah before breaking camp. You can't measure a team's ability by what it does in spring exhibitions. For if that were true, the Philadelphia Athletics of this season might be considered as an American league contender. Unfortunately for the A's, the games start counting after the bell rings.

The Crackers showed some real punch yesterday. Both Lester Burge and Fritz Oetting, who had been in a slump, were hitting. Burge drove a 450-foot homer off the pitching of Sugar Cain after previously lining out a single. Oetting blasted a single his first time up. Defensively, the Crackers were on their toes. And in the box, both Stein and Chipman looked very good.

Talk of "shake-up" is never good for the spirit of a young ball club, and thought of a shake-up is not even in the back part of Paul Richards' head. He was very emphatic about that yesterday. As he has asserted before, he thinks this club will fare well in the Southern league race.

"BETTER THAN NO BREATH AT ALL."

As a fellow once said, "Halitosis is better than no breath at all."

And I suppose this line of reasoning could apply to the State Game and Fish Department. Where there's life, there's hope.

One is bound to feel that, under present circumstances, the department is something like a fish out of water—it's gasping for breath and at any time may flop over and expire.

The people of Georgia who pay the freight—the hunters and fishermen—offered the state of Georgia a rope at the last session of the legislature.

The rope was accepted and deftly curled in a pigeon hole. The politicians figured they had their own rope, and now they're at the end of it. A hangman is much more clever. He wouldn't put his head in his own noose.

It is a sad commentary that the people of Georgia who hunt and fish support the State Game and Fish

HUBBELL'S HURT IS NOT SERIOUS, PHYSICIAN SAYS

Happy Terry Hints Carl May Pitch Briefly at Memphis Sunday.

BATON ROUGE, La., April 5. (AP)—Manager Bill Terry had reason to be happy today after receiving an optimistic report on the condition of Carl Hubbell, the New York Giants' southpaw ace.

In a telephone conversation from Memphis, Dr. J. Spencer Speed told Terry the screwball hurler's trouble with his left shoulder was nothing serious. Dr. Speed said he found evidence of a "pull" in one of the shoulder muscles and a suspected tear in the tissues surrounding the muscle, but nothing that would not yield rapidly to heat treatment and rest.

Terry believes it may be possible to pitch Hub a few innings Sunday in Memphis against the Chicks of the Southern association.

In the last intra-squad game at Louisiana State University today, Joe Moore's team made it five out of eight in the series with the Mel Ott. The score was 6 to 1 as Zeke Bonura hit a homer for the winners and Dick Coffman worked six scoreless innings.

SILENT TOM FACES OLD MATES HERE TODAY

Silent Tom Sunkel, who won 21 games for the Crackers last year, will face his ex-mates today when the St. Louis Cardinals invade Ponce de Leon park. The young left-hander will be honored by fans and the Atlanta club today. He also will be presented a check for winning the "Outstanding Cracker" contest conducted annually by The Constitution. Larry Miller won the contest in 1937.

ONNIE ROBINSON TO FACE SUNKEL THIS AFTERNOON

Burge, Anderson, Smith, Rubeling Lead Attack on Saints.

By TOM McRAE.

Fans were beginning to think the Crackers were carrying southern hospitality a little too far, but Paul Richards' nine came to life and mauled the St. Paul Saints, 9 to 4, yesterday to salvage the finale of the three-game series.

The Crackers battle the St. Louis Cardinals today at Ponce de Leon and will be opposed by Tom Sunkel, star of last year's Cracker team. Jack Troy, sports editor of The Constitution, will present Sunkel with a check for winning the "Outstanding Cracker" award last season. Richards said Onnie Robinson, rookie right-hander, will start for the Crackers and Clyde Smoll will probably follow. In his last appearance Smoll allowed the Red Sox three singles in six innings.

The spark seemed to have been applied by Lester Burge, rookie outfielder from New Bern, N. C. This was the first game Burge has started since the Crackers left training camp. Burge hit a home run, single, walked once and scored three runs. The homer hit the Cadillac sign in the second tier. His single was a line drive which reached the outfielder on the first hop.

Two of Burge's teammates last year at New Bern also played fine ball. Alf Anderson has been off in his hitting but got two yesterday. Alf's base running leaves nothing to be desired. Larry Smith, subbing as second-string catcher for the ailing Dewey Williams, lashed out a double and a single and stole a base. His double should have been a triple, but he rounded second clumsily and fell.

Besides these, Bolling and Rubeling got two hits each as the Crackers pounded Merritt "Sugar" Cain, a Carrollton boy, and Frank Gabler for 13 safeties. This is the same great Gabler who said last year after Vander Meer pitched his second no-hitter that the Cincinnati hurler "was just a flash in the pan."

Pete Stein pitched six innings for the Crackers and proved it will be hard to keep him from winning a starter's berth.

ONE RUN EARNED.

Only one of the three runs were earned. Two errors, one by Stein himself, allowed a Saint run in the first. Rubeling's error in the fifth made one of the two runs unearned.

Both teams were weak afield, each committing four miscues. Fritz Oetting, benched for Burge, hit for Stein in the sixth.

NOTABLES VIEW LANIER-MONROE

WALKER PARK, Ga., April 5. When Lanier High, of Macon, and the Monroe Aggies officially open the 1939 Georgia Prep-Hi Baseball league here Friday a gathering of notables will be present.

Ex-Governor Clifford Walker, of Georgia, is expected to pitch the first ball, with David I. "Red" Barron, president of the Monroe Aggies, at the plate and another equally famous son of sport behind the plate. The ceremonies will be brief but impressive as Georgia's newest baseball league opens.

The Aggies, fresh from their 7-0 defeat of G. M. A., at College Park, last Tuesday, will fire their strongest guns at the Poets. The home run twins, Bill Yearout and Stretch Murphy, head the heavy artillery of the Aggies, while Tex Williams and Rocky Waites stand ready to pitch in a battery that will be completed by J. B. Ruark, of football fame.

Rams Outhit Cards, But Are Blanked, 4-0

Red Sox Trim Reds, 9 to 4, As Grove Hurls Effectively; Eckhardt Out Two Months.

ANNISTON, Ala., April 5.—(AP)—The Anniston Rams, a Class B organization, outhit the St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 4, in an exhibition game here today but were beaten, 4 to 0, on bad breaks.

Two runs were scored by men who got on base through the charity route. The other two resulted from an outfield error.

The Anniston club, which boasts a band of hard hitters, collected four hits off Bob Bowman, starting pitcher, and the same number off Clyde Shoun, southpaw who relieved him in the sixth.

Grove Gives 1 Hit in Four Innings.

COLUMBIA, S. C., April 5.—(AP) A big second inning producing four runs started the Boston Red Sox to a 9-to-4 victory over the Cincinnati Reds today.

Singles by Cronin, Doerr, Lefty Grove, and a couple of infield plays and walks gave the Sox their inning against Junior Thompson.

Grove pitched effectively for his four frames, yielding only one run, a homer by Joost in the first. Myers homered off Jack Wilson in the ninth.

Chicks To Miss Eckhardt Two Months.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 5.—(UP)—Oscar Eckhardt, Memphis Chick outfielder who underwent an emergency appendectomy last night, was reported resting well tonight but physicians said he could not play ball for at least two months.

Eckhardt, former batting champion of the Pacific Coast league, had been counted on to supply the team with slugging power which was missing last year.

Paul Bruno, Greenville, Miss., rookie, will replace Eckhardt.

Pirates Win 2d From Browns, 7-4.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 5. (AP)—Two home runs by Johnny Rizzo, one with two mates on base, beat the St. Louis Browns, 7 to 4, here today to give the Pittsburgh Pirates their second straight over the American League.

Besides his homer, Rizzo had a double and a single.

Red Kress, who signed his contract with the Browns, was not in the game.

Sectional Qualifying for National Open Set at East Lake

36-HOLE ROUNDS WILL BE PLAYED HERE ON MAY 22

Entries Close May 9; Richmond and Troy, N. Y. New Points.

NEW YORK, April 5.—(P)—Sectional qualifying rounds for the 1939 National open golf championship, scheduled for May 22, will be held in 32 districts, compared to 31 last year. The championship will be played on the Spring Mill course of the Philadelphia Country Club, West Conshohocken, Pa., June 8-10.

Major changes in this year's list of sectional points, as announced today by the United States Golf Association, are the revival of try-outs at Troy, N. Y., and Richmond, Va.; two competitions in Texas, at Houston and Fort Worth, instead of the usual one; elimination of southern Wisconsin as a separate section, with players from that area going to Chicago, and only one qualifying point, Spokane, Wash., for the Pacific northwest.

Players from the New York metropolitan area will seek to qualify at Westbury instead of Mamaroneck, while for Oklahoma the site has been shifted from Oklahoma City to Tulsa, for Massachusetts from Springfield to Winchester, and for the Carolinas from Morganton to Charlotte.

The qualifying rounds, as usual, will be played at 36 holes. Entries close on May 9 at the offices of the U. S. G. A.

The list of qualifying points: Alabama, Country Club of Birmingham; Arizona, Phoenix C. C.; California, Midway C. C. at Monterey Park, and San Francisco Golf Club; Colorado, Cherry Hills Club, Englewood; District of Columbia and Maryland, Congressional C.; Washington, Florida, Ponte Vedra C. EAST LAKE HONORS HUDSON

"Scott Hudson Day" will be observed at East Lake today as the annual tournament schedule will be opened in a losers-pay dinner tournament. The veteran leader will be on the firing line for his team.

Losers-Pay Tourney Honors Hudson Today

Triple Feature Program Set at East Lake; Medal Play Handicap Opens.

By ROY WHITE.

Scott Hudson Sr., beloved leader of the Atlanta Athletic Club for more than a quarter of a century, will be honored this afternoon as East Lake's golfers open their annual tournament schedule in a losers-pay dinner tournament. The day will be known as "Scott Hudson Day."

Celebrating "Scott Hudson Day" will be a triple feature, the first of its kind ever planned for East Lake members, and entries in the dinner tournament may play simultaneously in all three events.

The three events are the opening round of a medal play handicap, the losers-pay dinner tournament, and the regular mid-week blind bogey.

Play in the medal handicap will extend through Sunday. Thirty-six holes will count, all in one day or two 18-hole rounds, any time between today and Sunday night.

The field will be divided into three groups, according to handicaps. Players with handicaps of 12 or under will form Class A, 13 to 18 will make up Class B, and 18 and up, will form Class C.

There will be two prizes in each group.

A special rule of the handicap committee will permit the selection of the best two out of three 18-hole rounds, played between this afternoon and Sunday. So a player with an inconsistent round may have the chance to play again and not be penalized for the one bad round.

Play in today's "losers-pay" will be over either course, agreeable to the participants and in foursomes, the best ball to count on every hole.

The players may select their own handicaps between certain limits to participate in the regular mid-week blind bogey, a feature which has been in progress for week-day players for several years.

Today's big feature of course will be the losers-pay tournament, which also serves as a general get-together for club members—and this year to honor Scott Hudson Sr.

Although he has been an official of the club for 10 to these many years, Hudson has found time to keep his golf game in fairly good shape and will be on the firing line this afternoon, leading the Hudson team.

Colonel Bob Jones will play opposite Hudson in leading the Jones team, and his big bass voice will lead that locker room quartet and the songs at the dinner.

The Jones-Hudson feud has resulted in more tie matches than victories, so well has been the matching of players, and it's the one big tournament every mem-

PHILS WILL QUIT CELLAR, BUT DOC WON'T SAY WHEN

Prothro Admits Summer Will Be Long, Hard; Eyes Future.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 5.—(P)—Dr. James Thompson Prothro, manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, made the majority opinion unanimous today when he voiced what everybody else has been thinking about his Phillies all spring.

"It looks like a long, hard summer," the Memphis dentist-east Arkansas planter asserted in a discussion of what his team wouldn't do this season.

Here for an exhibition game, which was cancelled because of rain, with the Little Rock Travelers, of the Southern association, Prothro still was able to smile—somewhat ruefully, however. He offered the Philadelphia fans one ray of hope. He said he didn't think the Phillies would permanently remain in the cellar.

Baseball's number one hero to Little Rock fans because of his successes with the Travelers before taking the helm of the Philadelphia club, Prothro said he would use the same system that lifted the Travelers from the depths of the second division to perennial championship contenders.

"I am going to attempt to build in Philadelphia just as I did in Little Rock—by bringing in young players and keeping the best of them," he said. "It may take longer than I expect, but one of these days the Phils are going to start the climb out of the National league cellar."

He admits frankly the climb won't start this year.

"I don't see a chance to get out of last place right now, unless, of course, I can make a trade which will strengthen my club materially before the season opens," he said. "The Phils won only 43 games a year ago, and while I hope to better that mark, it will take a lot of bettering to escape last place."

Prothro Buys Coble, Traveler Catcher.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 5.—(P)—Sale of Dave Coble, young catcher with the Little Rock Travelers for the past two years, to the Philadelphia Nationals was announced tonight by "Doc" Prothro, Philly manager.

"I know Coble is a poor hitter and doesn't stand much chance against big league pitching," Prothro said. "But he is a good receiver. I don't mind telling you I am buying him mainly for his hustle."

Prothro, Traveler manager last year, came here today for an exhibition game with Little Rock but the contest was rained out.

Coble, former University of South Carolina athlete, broke into professional baseball with Moultrie, Ga., in 1936.

Manager George Toporcer, of Travelers, announced that infielder Heinie Schuster, sent here on exhibition by Baltimore, of the International League, had been returned to that club. The pilot indicated he regarded Schuster a fine prospect but believed Babe Benning and Al Signiogo better qualified to handle third base and utility infield.

TETER CRASHES WALL OF BRICK

A mile-a-minute automobile crash into a solid brick wall and an attempt to jump over fourteen automobiles head the added thrills of Lucky Teter, the world's champion daredevil, and his renowned Hell Drivers will present Sunday afternoon at Lakewood Park in a hold-over thrill show engagement.

Fearless Ken Arnold, a survivor of countless deliberate automobile crashes, will drive a stock sedan at a 60-mile-an-hour speed into the brick wall.

Already constructed, the barrier consists of an outer layer of face brick, such as used in home construction, and huge stones, which backs up the surface covering. The entire wall, weighing 18,000 pounds, will be tugged into the track by special motors for the crash.

The hazards of the thrilling crash will be greatly increased by dynamite, placed in the front end of the car, and this heavy charge will be set off when the speeding car crashes into the solid brick barrier.

The thriller is regarded as the most dangerous of automobile crashes. The terrific force of the impact, coupled with the discharge of dynamite, is expected to transform the car into a tangled mass of wreckage.

Arnold, although in his early twenties, has been an outstanding stuntman for four years, during which time he has smashed and crashed automobiles more than 300 times. He has suffered many severe injuries, but always has returned to ply his trade. His only protection will be a crash helmet, such as used by auto race drivers, which will serve only to protect his head.

CHAMP, APE MAN CLASH TONIGHT

McAdams, Romanoff Top Arena Card; Cassidy Faces London.

Who can beat Jack McAdams, southern light-heavyweight wrestling champion? George Romanoff says he can and insists he will do it in tonight's headliner at Warren arena.

The facts are, however, that McAdams won the belt eight months ago. He has defended it almost weekly against the best grapplers in the 175-pound class. And he still is champion. Instead of growing weaker, the handsome titleholder gets stronger and more rugged with each match.

Romanoff, who wrestles barefooted, had McAdams on the run two weeks ago until an inflamed appendix forced him to forfeit. He thinks tonight is the night.

Mike Cassidy, unmasked Red Devil, battles Young London in the semi-final. Red Dugan and John Dameron open the attractive card at 8:30.

Mrs. Howell Wins Low Net With a 71

Mrs. Clark Howell, Mrs. Dave Black and Mrs. L. S. Schulte were winners Wednesday morning on the Capital City course in the weekly ladies' day tournament.

Mrs. Howell won low net prize with a 71. Mrs. Black finished second and also won the odd-holes prize. Mrs. Schulte had the least number of putts.

Hoke Cooley, assistant Capital City professional, was in charge of the tournament and will run the events every week during the spring and summer months.

KRESS SIGNS.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 5.—(P)—Ralph Kress, holdout shortstop of the St. Louis Browns, signed a contract today for 1939. Terms were not divulged.

ber of the club looks forward to opening the East Lake spring and summer schedule.

The dinner will be served at 7 o'clock and club members who cannot participate in golf may reserve plates for the dinner with George Bell, the East Lake manager.

Entries for the tournament will be received until 1:30 o'clock.

GENERAL MOTORS GMAC INSTALMENT PLAN

Rules for New Subdivisions Are Adopted by Commission

Planning Body Must Approve Plans of Future Civic Areas; Lot Standards Set Up; Recreation Section Must Be Provided for Residents.

Looking forward to the growth of Atlanta's environs and planning to prevent future traffic congestion, Fulton county commissioners yesterday adopted an ordinance setting up rules governing subdivisions of land in unincorporated areas. The measure presented by the planning board, was adopted without a dissenting vote. The ordinance provides:

1. Any master subdivision plan to be adopted later shall provide 150-foot rights-of-way for major highways; 80 to 100 feet for primary highways and 60 to 80 feet for minor highways.
2. All future roads and streets shall be in alignment as nearly as possible with existing roads and streets and as near right angle turns as possible must be provided.
3. Those wishing to establish new subdivisions shall file a preliminary plat with the planning commission, and, under ordinary circumstances, the group will pass on it within 30 days.
4. The tentative drawings must show width and approximate grade of streets or roads, radius of curves, dimension of lots, width of drainage areas, water courses, sewers, etc.
5. Sizes of lots and the length of the blocks also must be shown. A standard of 9,000 square feet is set for lot with 60 feet frontage, but provision is made for 4,800 feet for one with 40 feet frontage in certain instances. Business property must be indicated. Building lines generally shall not be less than 20 per cent of the depth of the lot. Blocks shall not exceed 1,800 feet between street lines and if they are more than 1,400 feet a cross walk must be provided in the middle of the block.
6. At least 10 per cent of the area of all subdivisions shall be reserved for recreation, park and playground use, and a final map of the entire tract must be filed with the commission within one year after the tentative layout has been approved. A fee of $5 is required when the tentative plans are filed with the board. It goes into the county treasury.

STIMSON BLASTS NEUTRALITY ACT

Former G. O. P. Secretary of State Lauds Roosevelt Foreign Policy.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—(UP) Former Republican Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson today advocated partial repeal of the neutrality act to free President Roosevelt's hands in curbing the aggression of Germany, Italy and Japan.

He said that the three members of the Rome-Berlin-Tokyo axis had broken promises and torn up all the treaties standing in the way of their own aggrandizement.

The tall, dignified expert on international affairs was the first witness at senate foreign relations committee hearings on proposals for repeal or revision of the law. Tomorrow, Bernard M. Baruch, financier, presidential adviser, and chairman of the World War Industries Board, will testify.

Stimson quickly drew the fire of senate isolationists, including Hiram Johnson, Republican, California, when he voiced an almost blanket indorsement of Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy and supported the President's theory, now being put into practice, that "there are measures short of war, but stronger and more effective than words," to halt the dictators.

Johnson denied Stimson's assertions that the neutrality act is rigidly restrictive and said he would not give the President "discretion to put us in a position where he can take us into war."

"Do you believe in neutrality?" he demanded.

"I am in favor of our country not taking part—or meddling—in a war unless it has some real interest that may be injured by the war," Stimson replied.

He added that if Great Britain and France went to war against the totalitarian powers he thought the United States should help with its resources.

Asked if he meant that this country should enter the war, he said: "That's exactly what I do not mean."

Stimson advocated abandonment of the principle of isolation as a means of "slowing down" the dictators and said that economic action, such as the United States is imposing on Germany, is a powerful weapon against the totalitarian nations because "they are in a notoriously vulnerable economic position."

"I agree with the President," he declared. "For the past two years we have been using our matchless resources to stimulate the activities and aggressions of our potential enemies. I know that it is sometimes said that an economic weapon is a dangerous one. But, in the case of ourselves, I doubt its truth. An when it comes to the danger of irritating aggressor nations, why the mere fact that we are a democracy irritates the axis."

"I weigh my words when I say I believe that our present Caucasian civilization is threatened by the gravest danger with which it has been confronted for four centuries."

Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, demanded to know how Stimson would define aggressors under the neutrality act. He replied that the nations which had broken treaties with or promises to the United States should be included.

BEN BLUE.

BEN BLUE TO HEAD NEW ROXY SHOW

'Annabel Takes a Tour' To Appear on Screen.

Ben Blue, whose rubber legs and wistful expression has carried him to the cinematic heights as a dancer and as a comedian, rules at the Roxy theater as star of the week beginning today. Aided by Eddie Hanley, Jimmy French and Betty Keane, he is expected by the management to break records set by Judy Canova last week.

Carol Bruce, singer, who appeared recently at Billy Rose's and the Casa Manana in New York, has also been imported for the Easter show. Jeanne Kirk and the Clayton, acrobatic dancers, and Jim Penman, laughter-making juggler, complete the vaudeville show.

The Roxyettes will present an Easter parade number and two other new dances.

On the screen: Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball return in the second "Annabel" comedy, "Annabel Takes a Tour."

EX-BANKER NAMED ON TWO CHARGES

Former Doerun Man Indicted by Colquitt Jury.

MOULTREE, Ga., April 5.—(AP) John F. Watkins, former cashier of the Citizens Service Bank at Doerun, Ga., was indicted by the Colquitt county grand jury today on charges of illegal entries and embezzlement.

Specific charges included entries of two cash letters of deposit to the First National Bank of Atlanta, one for $2,592 and the other for $2,143 "which have not been forwarded," and embezzlement of $3,528.

Twice within a year Watkins called officers to search for hold-up men, he said, robbed the bank. Watkins was reported in Florida.

CHILDREN WILL GET CHANGE IN MOVIES

Neighborhood Theaters To Provide Casts for Series of Local Comedies.

Atlanta children are begging for a movie treat. And it looks like all corners between the age of 3 and 12 will get a chance.

The Lucas & Jenkins neighborhood theaters are sponsoring a series of comedies to be made locally and featuring Atlanta children. Applications for tests are being taken at the West End, Cascade, Tenth Street, Techwood, Sylvan and Palace theaters in Atlanta; the DeKalb in Decatur; the Fairfax in East Point; the Fulton in Hapeville; the College Park in College Park and the Buckhead in Buckhead.

A two-reel comedy will be made with casts to be selected from each of these theaters. As soon as all applications are received, actual casting will begin. Melton Barker, the producer, announced. Approximately 100 children will be selected for each picture.

Every type of child is needed for the picture—tall, short, "faties" and "leanies." There is need for singers and dancers too, Barker said.

MRS. RAUSCHENBERG DIES IN HOSPITAL

Was Wife of Well-Known Presbyterian Minister Here.

Mrs. Fritz Rauschenberg, wife of the Rev. Mr. Rauschenberg, for many years a Presbyterian pastor in churches in Atlanta, College Park and Hartsville, died yesterday afternoon at a private hospital. She resided at 604 Second avenue, Decatur.

Mrs. Rauschenberg was a charter member of the Pryor Street Presbyterian church and was active in religious affairs in Atlanta and Decatur.

Surviving beside her husband are two daughters, Mrs. C. L. Greene and Mrs. L. R. Wilcox; two sons, W. R. Rauschenberg and Richard A. Rauschenberg, all of Atlanta; and two sisters, Mrs. E. D. Farris, of Atlanta, and Mrs. A. L. Harris, of Chattanooga, Tenn.

Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the West End Presbyterian church, the Rev. Harry B. Wade officiating. Burial will be in College Park cemetery under the direction of the F. G. Sammon Funeral Home, Lawrenceville.

To Film Atlanta Kiddies

This cameraman will soon start grinding pictures of Atlanta children who will be cast in comedies to be made in this city under sponsorship of Lucas & Jenkins' neighborhood theaters.

H.T. AMASON, 48, DIES AFTER LONG ILLNESS

Was Secretary of American Society of Certified Public Accountants.

H. Thomas Amason, 48, secretary of the American Society of Certified Public Accountants, died Tuesday afternoon at a private hospital after an illness of more than a year. He lived at 971 Virginia avenue.

Mr. Amason was a native of Araby, Ga., but had made his home in Atlanta for the last 30 years. He was a member of the Virginia Avenue Baptist church, taking an active part in the work of the Baptist Young People's Union, and of Greenfield Lodge No. 400, F. & A. M.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Lottie Menkes, of Atlanta; a daughter, Miss Doris Amason, and a son, T. J. Amason, all of Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock this morning at the Virginia Avenue Baptist church, the Rev. S. F. Davis officiating. Burial will be in Greenwood cemetery under the direction of Avtry & Lowndes.
